The minds of children are developed by play. Toys well chosen represent not merely amusement but occupation and stimulation for the childish mind.

Children learn as they play. Boys and girls develop their minds, planing about their games, playing with, talking to and thinking about their dolls. The boy with his toy soldiers, and toy machinery, and the little girl with her dolls, her toy tea set, and her doll house, are preparing for the real work of future years.

To starve the imagination is almost as bad as to starve the stomach of a child.

To deprive a child of the toys that it needs for mental hapiness is to injure that child's chance in life.

There are more starved brains than starved bodies in this country.

It is not necessary or wise to give too mony toys. To put a little child in a playroom, crowded with playthings, more than the child can understand, grasp or deal with, is as foolish as to leave the child with no toys at all. There is reason in everything. Children can be spoiled by too many gifts, their little brains dazzled, and they can be spoiled by the lack of toys.

Every good father and mother should remember that Christmas is a day of inspiration, and that to little minds playthings are the only realities.

Make the children happy, and you contribute to their mental and physical growth.

What is power? Like Gaul, it is divided into three parts. There is intellectual power, Newton, Copernicus, Galileo and Kepler had it. There is spiritual power, possessed by those that establish new religious and persuade others to thing as they do.

Then, least glorious, there is material power, which makes other men do as you command.

Napoleon had the last, also Caesar, Alexander, Hammurabi, William the Conqueror, and thousands of others.

It is possessed, also by a Napoleon who directs the elevators in a downtown office building. He is about as tall as Napoleon, up to your shoulder, and at least twice as dignified as Napoleon. His commands are obeyed.

Many elevators go up and down. Not one goes until he clicks and gives the order. He stands straight and dignified in his uniform, never smiling, knowing that the going up and coming down of those elevators depends on him.

You ask a question and he points. No word uttered. The point tells you which elevator you must take.

Concrete Construction Can be Undertaken In Winter

There is no difficulty in doing concrete work in cold weather if a few simple precautions are taken.

If you intend to put up a garage, add a porch to your home, put a new floor in the cellar, or make any other improvements of concrete, you do not need to wait until spring.

You can begin the work at once. And you can do it yourself if you have at hand the booklet on concrete which this bureau has for free distribution. This contains all necessary instructions and many suggestions for this type of building.

NEW YORK SUN AND TELEGRAM EDITOR-OWNER ILL 10 DAYS

Underwent Operations for Appendicitis and Peritonitis.

BORN IN MAINE

From Investment of $500 He Made Millions.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Frank Munsey, owner and editor of the New York Sun and the New York Telegram, and one of the best known and beloved publishers of the country, died at 6:30 o'clock this morning in Lenox Hill hospital where he had been ill since December 13.

One of America's Foremost Editors.

Mr. Munsey was operated on for acute appendicitis on December 13 and acute peritonitis developed. Last Sunday his condition was such that a second operation was necessary.

His condition became grave last night and it was evident to his physicians that the end was near.

He was 71 years old and spent all his life in the publishing business. He was regarded as one of America's foremost editors and a man of high character.

Mr. Munsey rallied from a sinking spell at midnight last Monday but suffered a relapse at 4 o'clock this morning.

The end came peacefully, apparently without much suffering.

Up to the final collapse, the publisher retained his faculties and spoke to those about him. He had requested that his sister, Mrs. John M. Hyde, of St. Petersburg, Fla., not be sent for because of her advanced age and enfeebled condition.

Worked as Telegrapher.

Frank Munsey was born in the little town of Mercer, Maine, on August 21, 1854. He attended the public school of Mercer but soon felt the urge to make money and left to take his first job in the country store as general utility boy.

From there he went to a telegraph

TWO ASPHYXIATED BY GAS FUMES

CINCINNATI, Dec. 22.—Finding of the bodies of William Sexton, 60 years old, and his son James, 22 years old, in their home on Bogen street, asphyxiated by the fumes from a gas heater, caused the police and health authorities to reiterate a warning urging caution in the use of gas heating appliances. Neighbors of the Sextons detecting fumes escaping from the room, forced the door and found the dead bodies.

The heater was burning, but a leak in the pipe had filled the room with gas.

Clean Up Yuletide Mail; Postoffice Closed Christmas

Not a piece of Christmas mail will remain undelivered at the East Liverpool postoffices on Christmas eve, according to plans of Postmaster J. E. McClure.

The postal force is working overtime to keep the two offices from becoming congested during the holiday rush. The office is cleared before work is suspended each night, although many of the employes work until midnight.

The downtown and East End postoffices will be closed all day, Christmas, there being no deliveries by city or rural carriers. Postmaster General Harry S. New recently announced that all postal employes will eat their Christmas dinners at home this year.

Home Sold, Woman Raises Bill To Play Santa.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 22. — Mrs. Marie Siders, shy and diminutive, was on her way today to her husband and seven children on a farm near Wabash, because justice was tempered with Christmas fellowship by government officials.

Their farm was sold for the mortgage against it, and she came to Indianapolis seeking work to earn enough to make Christmas really Christmas for the seven youngsters back on the farm.

There was on work available for her. No money, Christmas in the offing, store shelves filled with Christmas joys and those seven children eagerly awaiting her return — these thoughts tormented her until, desperate, she crudely tried to raise a $1 bill to $10 to make Christmas purchases.

"Released under $2 cash bond," said U. S. Commissioner Kern. And L. F. Meredith, U. S. marshal, and Thomas E. Halls, chief of the secret service here, "chipped" in a dollar each.

A bystander carelessly dropped a $5 bill on the table and said huskily, "That will help in giving the seven kids something."

FREE DENTAL EXAMINATION OFFERED CITY SCHOOL PUPILS

Dentists Ask Board of Education to O. K. Plan.

HEALTH CAMPAIGN

Teachers Will Receive Their Christmas Pay Tomorrow.

Free dental examination for children in the elementary school was offered the board of education by a committee representing the East Liverpool-Wellsville Dental society, at a meeting of the board in the high school building last evening.

The committee was made up of Dr. Joseph T. Williamson, spokesman; D. R. R. Bode and Dr. K. D. Dotson. Dr. Williamson said that the dentists sole motive was interest in the health of the school children.

He explained that the plan of dental examination in the public schools was introduced about eight years ago, when a dentist's chair and other equipment were furnished by a women's club. The work was started but had not gone far when America entered the World war, and it was discontinued.

Suggest Employment of Dentist.

If the board can obtain the necessary funds, the dentists suggested that a licensed dentist be employed by the schools for five half days each week, whose duty it would be to make examinations, extract teeth, make fillings and do other dental work, without expense to the children. If this plan is adopted the dentists agree to furnish all the necessary material free of charge. A dentist may be employed, the board was told, for a half day each school day for $100 or $125 per month. One organization has already promised to contribute $100 for this purpose should the school board approve the plan

BOSTON, Dec. 22.—John Rockefeller Prentice, Yale student and prospective heir to the Rockefeller millions, is here to spend Christmas with his "mind pal," Miss Frances Howard, Smith college graduate and business school instructor—the "girl who helped him make good."

It was for Miss Howard's uncle, Frank Chase, that young Prentice worked five years following his suspension from Yale.

Friendship between the student and the instructor is "intellectual," according to Miss Howard.

"I wouldn't have a member of my family marry a Rockefeller—the difference of worldly position is too great to permit a happy marriage," said Chase, the uncle.

Wells. Boxes of candy were also presented to members of the Seven Sirens' orchestra, and their leader, Mrs. Danks Cochran, who were guests at the meeting. Mayor Kendrick Informs Corps Commander That His Services as Head of Police Department are Not Longer Required, Declaring "You Put Me In Hole."

"I SMOKED YOU OUT OF YOUR HOLE," IS RETORT AS DOOR IS SLAMMED

Deposed Official, His Face Livid and Fists Clenched, Turns on Heels and Storms Out of City Hall—Later Says he Will Probably Recall Resignation.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—Major General Smedley Butler, resigned from the United States marine corps today to continue serving Mayor Kendrick and Philadelphia as director of public safety, only to be notified a few minutes later by the mayor that his services were no longer desired.

"You put me in a hole," said the mayor as Butler informed him of his resignation from the marines.

"I smoked you out of your home. Now I know where I stand," retorted Butler as he slammed the door thus ending his sensational and stormy career as safety director of Philadelphia.

"I don't want you in my cabinet as a resigned officer," the mayor told Butler. "You put me in a hole and I have made other arrangements."

Butler Is Silent.

Butler's face became livid. He clenched his fists, turned on his heels and stormed out of the office.

Upon reaching his office, Butler refused to discuss the matter.

When he became calm Butler stated that he could recall his resignation and would probably do so.

Coolidge Decides To Accept World League Invitation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—President Coolidge has decided to accept the league of nations' invitation to participate in its disarmament conference, it was plainly indicated at the White House today, following the cabinet meeting.

The league's invitation is being considered from a constructive standpoint, the president told callers, and with a view to ascertaining how the United States can best co-operate with the purpose of the league in obtaining world-wide reduction of armament.

Simultaneously with this clarification of the White House attitude, there was introduced in both houses of congress at noon resolutions endorsing the proposed gathering, and authorizing Mr. Coolidge appoint the necessary American delegates.

Democrats sponsored the authorization in both senate and house.

TOLEDO, Dec. 22. — Three armed bandits early today held up the Starr avenue car barns of the Community Traction company, and made their getaway with cash totalling more than $4,000.

The money was contained in large boxes. They fled towards Cleveland, Arthur Greely, a car dispatcher, in charge of the office, said.

TWO SOLONS WILL DEMAND CAPS FOR FIREMEN IF POLICE GET VISORS

Sauce for Goose Is Sauce for Gander, Is Attitude of Councilmen Kerr and Farrall on Controversy.

Should the ordinance authorizing purchase of caps for members of the police force be placed on third reading at the tomorrow evening's session of the city solons, another measure, authorizing the safety director to purchase caps for members of the fire department, will be introduced by Solons N. P. Kerr and Thomas Farrall.

Councilmen Kerr and Farrall have opposed the use of city funds to purchase caps for patrolmen, contending that headwear is part of the policeman's uniform. A state examiner recently ruled that the law does not permit the city to purchase uniforms for policemen.

Members of the police force declare that their caps always have been purchased by the city, but heretofore legislation authorizing the expenditure was never necessary. The state examiner recently announced that council must approve legislation to purchase equipment for the police.

The ordinance was placed on first and second reading by a vote of five to two, Solons Chambers, Larcombe, Rowe, Eardley and Hayes approving it, while Kerr and Farrall opposed it.

"If the city is going to buy caps for the policemen, it is no more than fair that they should be purchased for members of the fire department," said Councilman Kerr today. The ordinance has been drafted by Solicitor Brokaw and will be introduced Wednesday evening if the other ordinance is passed on third and final reading.

LA FOLLETTE WILL MAKE BOW AS INSURGENT BY OPPOSING WOODLOCK

Young Bob Will Carry "Declaration of Independence" Into Effect Against New Yorker.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Young Bob LaFollette will make his senatorial debut as an insurgent by opposing the appointment of Thomas F. Woodlock, of New York, to the interstate commerce commission, it was learned today.

Upon Woodlock's appointment, young LaFollette will carry into effect the "declaration of independence" which he delivered to the Republican leaders of the senate a week ago when admitted to party membership.

Although the nomination of Woodlock will not be considered until after the Christmas vacation, administration leaders already are concerned over its fate because of the charge that President Coolidge entered "a deal" with Democrats by sending the appointment to the senate along with the nomination of Richard V. Taylor, of Alabama. The naming of the southerner, it was said; was done to alleviate Democratic opposition to Woodlock, confirmation of whose appointment a year ago was blocked by Democratic members of the senate interstate commerce committee. The charge was flatly denied by administration senators and Senator Underwood, D., of Alabama, who recommended Taylor, but is aroused considerable Democratic opposition toward the Woodlock nomination.

In announcing his opposition to the New Yorker, young LaFollette revealed that he was following directly in his father's footsteps on this particular issue. The elder LaFollette, as a member of the senate interstate commerce committee, helped to block Woodlock's confirmation last March.

THIRTY.

"I don't think you ever will have much success keeping a rein on Marion Harwood," Wyman observed, laying down his coat and rubbing his hands as if they were cold.

Laurel, tense, despairing turned away and went to the window to peer out into the darkness. When WOULD Mrs. Daly come? It seemed like hours since she had called her.

Wyman walked slowly across the hall and peered into the library. At the threshold he turned and glanced back at Laurel. For a moment he paused, then he returned to her side. "Laurel, II hope we can always be friends."

She peered again into the darkness, then faced him. "Yes, FRIENDS, Wyman."

For a moment they stood eye to eye, current passing between them, then Laurel turned back to the window. Now she could see a car flashing its lights up the drive. In a moment the Dalys were at the door. Brent Daly, fat, puffing, followed his wife into the house wearily, and nooded weakly to Laurel. Mrs. Daly noted Wyman Holt's figure retreating into the library.

"Where is Marion?"

"Shall I have Louis call her?"

"No." Mrs. Daly threw back her wrap and handed it to her husband, her brows arching at the sounds that were emanating from the ballroom and the library. Majestically she walked into the former. Her husband, after looking around with a helpless air for a place to deposit the wrap, let it fall upon a chair and followed by Laurel's side. "Girls will be girls," he remarked, with the suggestion of a beam.

"Yes—yes!" A second later she couldn't have told whether she had said yes or no.

If the late arrival of Mrs. Brent Daly, imposing dowager, occasioned any surprise among the mary-making guests, they did not indicate it. The dance went on, and the noise continued. She stood staring at the rowdy spectacle, her color rising higher very fraction of a second. One glance at his wife caused Brent Daly to leave Laurel's side and wander, carelessly, back into the hall.

Her lips tightly compressed, Mrs. Daly marched into the library, the gryating couples making way for her as she went. The ballroom became quieter. Noble Harwood's sister found her niece perched on a library-table, an expensive tapestry, stained with wine, scruffled under her feet singing,

Hadda little he dog,
Hadda little she dog,

This was as far as she got with the ditty.

"Hello, Aunty!"

A hush settled around the table.

Mrs. Daly collected herself. "I have something to say to you, Marion." She moved away from the table. Marion, her countenance suddenly sobering, got down obediently and followed. Laurel, very self-conscious in the presence of these young people who somehow sensed that she was responsible for this scene, walked to the kitchen, as if she had a mission.

Noble's sister chose the upstairs as a place to "say something" to her niece. Marion stood regarding her solemnly, subdued.

"I thing it is time for your guests to go. . . and your father shall hear of this."

"Aw, aunty."

"Aw, Aw! Is that all you can say? AW!" the effort exhausted Mrs. Daly.

"Oh, I know what's the matter," Marion pouted. "It's Laurel. She telephoned you, I know. And I'll just tell you this, I'm not going to stand for her intereference. You'd thing she owned this house. I'm just a nobody here, that's all, a nobody." Tears of rage were appearing on her cheeks.

Mrs. Daly was nonplussed. Her niece had tapped a vulnerable point—Laurel.

"SHE didn't have anything to do with the planning of this, did she?" she asked suddenly.

"She said it would be all right. I asked her to be the chaperon. But instead of staying here, she went out and didn't return until just a little while ago." The pencilling upon her eyebrows, dampened by the tears, was messing up her eyes and making her a sorry looking person indeed.

"Well, I shall see that Noble Harwood knows all about this, Mrs. Daly announced firmly. "Go to your room and go to bed—you're not respectable looking. I'll send your guests home."

"Don't aunty. I ——."

"Oh, I won't embarrass you, you young ——." The expression was not completed. Noble Harwood's sister turned back down the stairs, and rang for Louis. Laurel appeared from out of the back of the hall.

"I think you might have put a stop to this if you had tried. I must say you made a pretty job of chaperoning!"

"But, Mrs. Daly——." Laurel stifled the protest. Her color rose. It was folly to argue with her sister-in-law at this time and place, with the young people within hearing distance.

Louis presented himself. "Bring the wraps of the guests." She looked around for her husband, and not finding him holding her cape, picked it up wrathfully from the spot where he had let it fall. Until he came to her, she stood at the foot of the stairway, patting her foot, and indicating no recognition of the young people who passed her on their way out.

Laurel walked wearily up the stairs. What a mess. Something made her feel she was to blame. But how could she have prevented it? And what would Noble say?

TYPICAL BOOB ENDS GAMING IN CLEVELAND

Lancaster, Pa., Traction Official is Held as Thief.

HE LOST $40,000

His Confession Closes Places in City's Suburbs.

CLEVELAND—Faced by a growing tide of popular disapproval the "palaces of chance," located in the more obscure suburbs surrounding the city, are closed today. The action, following the confession of H. H. Hersey, Lancaster, Pa., traction official, that he lost $28,000 at dice, blackjack and other gaming, then topped it off with a loss of $11,000 Thanksgiving night in a stud poker game in which the limit was $200.

No more—at least until the present excitement, which threatens to result in the removal of one or more officials—will the game-keeper's drone as he deals the elusive cards making up the number 21 to the fish-faced gamblers be heard enticing them to increase their wagers, while the "payoff" man, his roll constantly increasing with the play as it goes on, adjures the players to "get it down."

No Dues in Clubs.

Cleveland had three gambling institutions of more than usual pretentiousness doing business just outside its borders. Operated as "clubs" their real nature was but thinly concealed, anyone, regardless of color or social distinction, being eligible for membership, and there being no "dues" except the sums wagered and lost.

Regular taxi lines operated from a downtown headquarters and hauled members free of charge to these "clubs." Large sums were staked and that the gamblers were usually unsuccessful in beating the house is pretty well evidenced in recent suits filed in common pleas court to recover money lost in gambling. George Himmelstein, alleged proprietor of the Grand Fraternity club, is now defending actions brought to recover $58,000, said to have been lost within a week.

Himmelstein, according to police reports, has gone from poverty to the near-millionaire class within a few years' time, although once or twice his rise to fortune met setbacks, when "longshots" heavily backed, went over, or when the favorites won too regularly at shorter odds.

Typical "Boob."

Hersey, according to habitues of the Clinton club, where he dropped $28,000 of the $40,000 he admitted taking from his company, was a typical "boob" at the gambling game.

"That guy didn't know anything about gambling," one who watched his roll melt rapidly at "blackjack" and dice said. "He was the easiest mark that ever came inside the doors, and it wasn't any wonder he lost the money so fast.

"Why, Hersey would bet that black was white if they gave him long enough odds," he continued. "He seemed to like to lose money."

Hersey, facing a probable long prison term as a result of his sudden yielding to temptation when he went to a bank and drew $40,000 then drove to Harrisburg and boarded a train for Cleveland, was of great assistance to police, after he broke down and confessed his whole story.

When arrested, all he had left of his loot was a solitary nickel and the rubber bands which had been around the money when he drew it from the bank.

Dead Comrade's Ashes Carried in Shell by Racing Crew in Japan

TOKYO.—"The my ashes with you and do your best to win the race."

This was the injunction placed upon the crew of the Otaru Middle school by one of their comrades who died a few days before the oarsmen were to leave for Tokyo to compete in athletic contests at Meiji Shrine. In compliance with the dying wish of their late crewmate, the Otaru oarsmen carried a small urn containing his ashes in their shell as they entered the race.

Although the Otaru crew gave their best throughout the contest it was not enough. Honsho Middle school swept across the finish line a few inches ahead of them. After the race the Otaru oarsmen placed the urn containing the ashes of their former comrade before a shrine in their training quarters and offered apologies to his spirit for failing to win.

Disarmament Plans

About 50 countries have invited the United States to join with them in a general study of the armament question, with a view to meeting later, probably some time next year, for some more practical armament limitation.

The present effort is to agree on such fundamental things as what makes war power, what are the various kinds of war power, how much of such power the nations have now, and how little they can get along with. When those facts are assembled and accepted, it may be possible to go ahead and get somewhere with arms reduction by land, air and water, thus saving a lot of money, lessening competition, subduing international fears and making wars less likely.

Before the World war, the United States would have joined in any such undertaking as a matter of course. During the war such action was looked forward to as a peace program worth fighting for. Since the war America has taken the leadership in this very thing. Progressive disarmament by international agreement is an American policy, and a non-partisan policy.

It happens that the 50 nations now inviting America to cooperate in such a policy belong to the league of nations and extend the invitation through that body. It is hardly conceivable that, merely because America sees fit to remain outside of the league, it should refuse to co-operate with the league in such a great and typically American reform.

A Pleasant Resolution

Close on the trail of Christmas festivities comes the New Year. Somebody with an efficiency complex, or perhaps only with good sense, suggests that now is as good a time as any to plan one's New Year's resolutions. He suggests, too, that the real success of this annual resolving business, like success in other lines, depends on starting on a small scale and gradually working up to something bigger. Two resolutions are offered for consideration.

1. Do not spend more than your income.

2. Devote a few minutes each day to learning something useful.

They are pretty good, as resolutions go, but it might be objected that they are too much alike in spirit. Why not change the second a little?

2. Devote a few minutes each day to enjoying something lovely?

There are quite a number of things that qualify, both indoors and out, inexpensive and ready at hand. There are books and music and pictures within and there is still all of nature without. Sunsets occur early enough these days to be enjoyed by many people on their way home from work. Stars were never finer. Children playing out of doors nearly always reward appreciative scrutiny. The list of possibilities is too long to enumerate, but a devotee of this habit will find it infinitely varied and suited to every taste.

American Aristocracy

Vincent Astor, New York aristocrat and multimillionaire, interviewed for Collier's, insists that there isn't any aristocracy of the sort commonly imagined. That, he says, is an idea spread by the movies, which give "Hollywood interpretations of the luxurious laziness of the so-called Four Hundred."

"True," he says, "rich people sometimes display their wealth in a vulgar way. But the society people I am privileged to know—I so call them because that is the popular tag—are folks with usual American tastes and usual American jobs.

"They may have more money than the average American, but they don't eat any more meals or wear any more clothes, and they can't sleep in any more beds. If there is any social gulf between different groups of Americans, it isn't so much measured by money as by headlines."

Very likely the headlines do give an artificial notion sometimes of the distance separating "high society" from other kinds of society, just as people generally exaggerate the importance of "social recognition."

If there is a real aristocracy in this country—and if there isn't, there ought to be—it is a kindly, tolerant aristocracy of taste and manners, which isn't necessarily associated with wealth.

The Patient's Courage

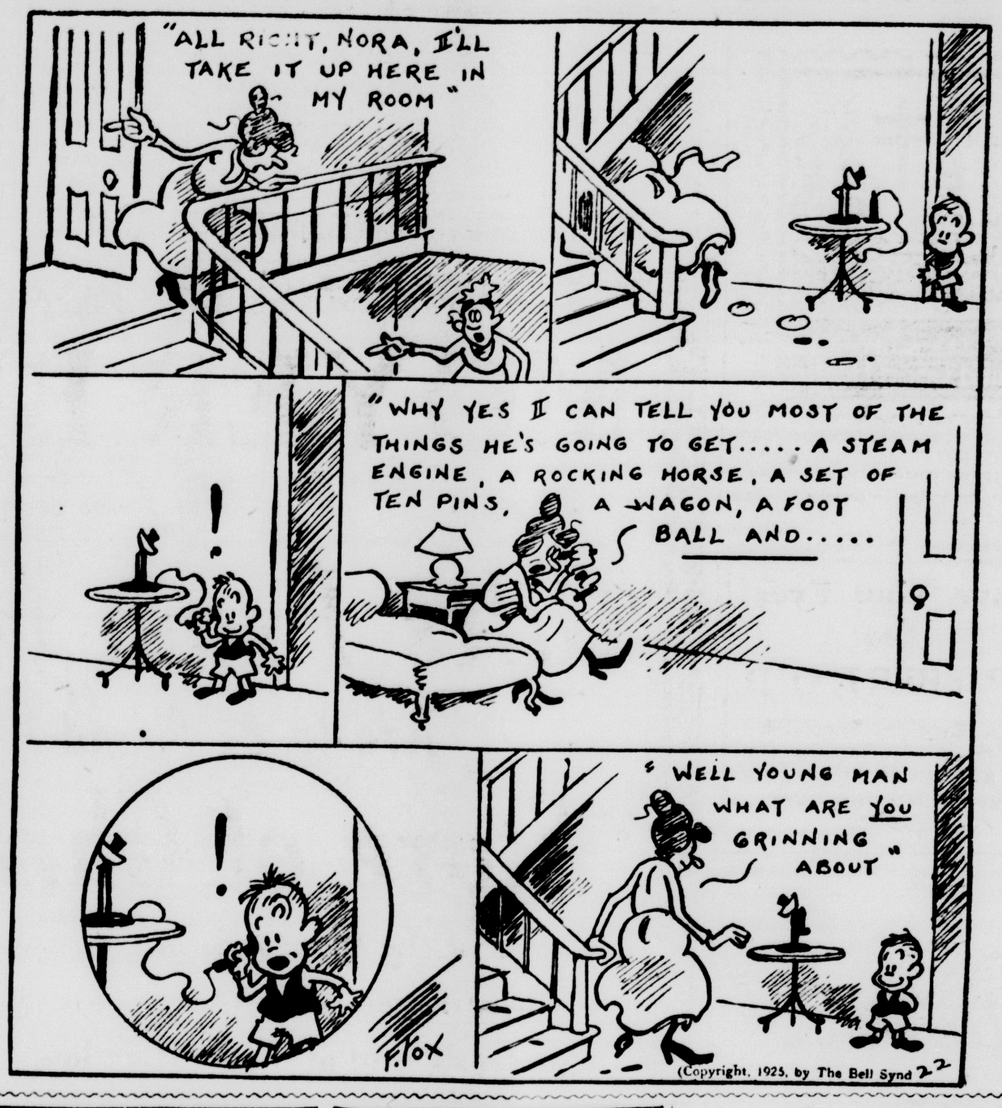

"Courageous persons are the easiest to cure of goiter troubles, whether the rest cure, X-radiation or surgical treatment is used." This is the testimony of George W. Crile, one of the best known American surgeons. "The defeatist patient," he adds, "is likely to make definite and permanent improvement."

The observation doubtless applies to a wide range of other diseases as well. In large degree, no doubt, it applies to all, even those which do not depend so directly on nervous condition and mental attitude.

Courage has been called "the fundamental virtue." It may also be the fundamental rule of health. Any physician will testify that a big factor in any illness is the will to recover. The patient who is determined to get well, and believes he can, has the victory half won already.

Courage alone will not necessarily work a cure. But supplemented by common sense and obedience to the doctor's instructions, it multiplies the patient's chances for quick recovery from moderate illness and for ultimate recovery if there is a fighting chance.

High Spots in the Life of Little Stanley The Great Explorer— By F. Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — A New Yorker intent upon making a brighter world for his fellows recently started a Tip-a-Dime league. No tip by members was to exceed that amount and the plan died aborning. He could not find a single person who would take oath of allegiance.

A dime tip 10 years ago was considered sufficient for the casual service of the hat checker. Today a quarter is the minimum, and brigands of the coat rooms put decoy half dollars in their plates and are successful, especially in the night clubs, in luring many tips that size.

Indeed a young lady at Montmartre several years ago was presented with a hundred dollar bill for taking care of a silk hat for three hours. So far as can be learned the donor's knee jerks were normal. He was in the after-glow of "a big killing in the street."

Tipping has been bloated to proportions of a huge gouge beyond the average purse. In a few instances it has even spread to the front office of large hotels. It was a personal experience of mine to receive intimation from a clerk at one on Forty-second street that for $10 a reservation could be secured for a relative.

As matters stood there were no vacancies. No secrecy was involved. The gaily habited young man presented his card as the one to whom the fee might be sent. A luncheon tip for two is rarely under a dollar, and the dinner tip $2 in the best places. The size of the check is not considered.

It is no secret that head porters at some of the largest hotels work without salary and depend upon tips. The income in some instances exceeds that of the general manager. It is said two are making more than $25,000 a year. Several are rich in the New York term.

It has been my experience that the most appreciative of all public servants who receive tips are the "red caps" at the great railroad terminal stations. They hi ve a thank you and a smile. The most discourteous are those who drive roving taxis.

There are a number of head waiters who politely refuse tips in public. They have their own clientele who mail generous checks—usually around Xmas time—and this saves them the humilition of being tipped before others.

A traveler has made it a custom to send a souvenir to his wife from various places he visits. In a New York hotel the other morning he happened to pass several rooms thrown open for display of what appeared to be women's clothes. The traveler said cheerfully to the man who appeared to be in charge "Have you a pretty dress for a pretty girl?" The salesman resitated. "There are burial clothes," he said.

O, yes, I forgot about the headwaiter who was given an automobile by a diner for rendering a neat service. The dined was supposed to be in Philadelphia when his wife came in with a party of friends. The headwaiter held them at the entrance while an assistant gave warning and scurried the diner and his companion from an unfinished meal out a side entrance.

Then there is the story of a straying husband in a supper club that provided only one exit. He was shown to a window fire escape when his wife came in and here he perched for three hours in a drizzling rain. Another good fellow—all wet.

A beauty parlor on Madison has a card in its entrance reading: "By appointment only. New clients must furnish satisfactory reference." I assume one must furnish proof a mole is genuine.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Bridging the English Channel.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—American engineers are deeply interested in a plan to bridge the English Channel that is now under consideration by commercial organizations in London and Paris. On this side of the Atlantis it has been contended for years that if American enterprise and engineering talent had a chance at it the problem of transportation from England to the Continent would be solved speedily, the solution generally advocated being a tunnel.

Now what is heralded as possily a more feasible solution has been brought forth by a Swiss enginer, Jules Jaeger. This visionary would link up England and the Continent with a gigantic construction that would be in effect a combination of bridge, viaduct and canal. It is claimed that there are fewer engineering problems involved in this above-water conquering of the Channel than there are in the tunnel project, that it would be far more efficient, and that the cost would be comparatively little greater.

For more than half a century the tunnel idea has been under consideration ,and engineers have proved, to their own satisfaction at least, that it was entirely practicable. The latest estimate of its cost approximated $300,000,000.

M. Jaeger, who sponsors what is known as the bridge plan, says that his scheme can be carried through at a cost of not to exceed $400,000,000.

This plan contemplates the construction of two parallel jetties from Calais, in France, to Deal, in England, a distance of some 26 miles. The jetties would be broken by high cantilever bridges at either end to permit water traffic up and down the channel. Each jetty would be wide enough to carry a double track railroad with a superimposed roadway for motor and other vehicular traffic. The space between the jetties, one thousand feet of sheltered and protected waterway, would be in effect a great canal extending from the Calais Canal to England. The depth of this canal would range from 120 to 180 feet.

Extended To London.

Eventually, it is said, the canal would be extended from Deal across the northeast corner of Kent to Hefne Bay, in an estuary of the Thames river, thus making London in reality the terminus of the Continental rail, road and waterway systems. Railroad and motor traffic would be carried in a westerly direction from Deal to connect with the present rail and highway systems leading into London.

Great harbors would be constructed off both Calais and Deal, with adequate facilities for the transportation of cargo from rail and barge to steamer. The trains and other road traffic would be carried over these harbors on the immense bridges heretofore mentioned, which would be similar to some of the big East river bridges at New York. These bridges would be protected by giant breakwaters that would safeguard the traffic through the canal.

The shortest route across the Channel would have Dover as the English terminus, but M. Jaeger has selected the longer route to Deal for two reasons. First, he says that he will thus avoid the traffic congestion at Dover, and second, he will avoid the terrific currents off Dover which would add immeasurably to the construction difficulties and expense of the project.

Should the enterprise be carried through it will be possible for trains and motor vehicles to run direct from England to France and thence throughout the Continent, for canal barges to be loaded at the docks of London and then towed through a sheltered waterway into the Continental canal system, and to revive the channel carferry traffic that attained enormous proportions during the war through the operation of the military car ferries between Richborough, just north of Deal, to France. In the Jaeger car ferry service there would be virtually none of the hazards and interruption from bad weather such as the war-time service in open water experienced, for the ferries would be sheltered by the jetties and breakwaters all the way across the channel.

The Military To Decide.

Military authorities in England will probably decide whether the Jaeger project is to be undertaken, for it is well known that the British war office has long prevented the construction of a tunnel under the channel. The French are said to have favored the tunnel idea and to have been ready at any time to cooperate in carrying it through, but the British military leaders have heretofore maintained a united front in opposition.

The reason for this has not been the fear that in time of war the tunnel could not be adequately guarded, or obstructed, or in part destroyed to preclude its use by the enemy. It is recognized that it would be comparatively easy for England to make certain that either she and her allies would have sole use of the tunnel, or that none could use it.

However, the real bugaboo in the British military mind is in connection with possible post-war complications. Suppose England should be defeated in a war in the course of which she had controlled or put out of commission a tunnel under the channel or a bridge over it. Terms of peace might be forced upon her that would provide for the restoration of the tunnel or bridge and its operation for all future time under international or even foreign control.

That is the thing that is unthinkable to the English. Their insular tradition means much to them, but they place even more than a sentimental value upon the few miles of tempestuous sea that separate their tight little island from the continent. They have always believed that they could control traffic by boat across the channel, or were willing to take their chances of being able to do so. But to construct a safe and easy way across, whether by bridge or by tunnel, and then have that control of that way taken definitely and permanently out of their hands—that is a possibility that is not contemplated with equanimity in Downing Street.

Singugarly enough, perhaps, the airplane may have an important bearing on the decision to undertake either the tunnel or the more recent channel bridge project. With air transportation developed to where it is now, and with the almost limitless prospects of its future development, the English Channel is no longer so much of a barrier, for ships of the air have all the room imaginable, up, down, and sideways, in which to hop across, and the crossing becomes a matter of minutes rather than hours.

In the circumstances, even the British military mind may conclude that if a trans-channel bridge or tunnel would be commercially advantageous there is no longer any sound reason why it should not be constructed.

Advocates of the bridge scheme, by the way, point out that it would it would have been a tremendous military asset to England and her allies to have had such a dam across the channel during the late war. It would have been a barrier to the operation of German submarines such as it was never possible to establish by means of mines and controls.

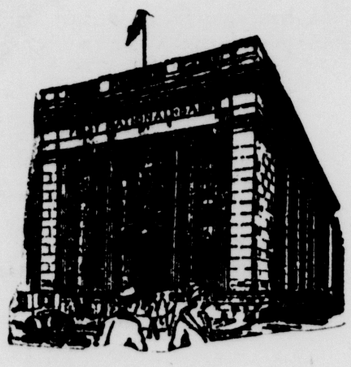

Part of the popularity of French dress ing lies in the fact that there is little of it.—Fortoria Times.

WORK STARTED ON COFFERDAM

The Dravo Contracting company of Pittsburgh who have the contract for the construction of the $150,000 river docks on the Ohio river for the Weirton Steel company announced last week that a permit has been issued and work will start immediately on the construction of an Ohio river type box cofferdam which will be located in the Ohio river at the proposed terminal for the Weirton Steel company.

Construction work on the general harbor was launched several weeks ago and is progressing nicely.

The cofferdam will have a length up and down river of approximately 1240 feet from the West Virginia full pool water line at a distance of approximately 180 feet at the upper and 220 feet at the lower end.

This cofferdam will be built to a height of about 6 feet above full pool and will be protected by a red light at each of the upper and lower corners.

This will leave a channel of approximately 400 feet for navigation between the cofferdam nad Brown's Island.

CHICAGO—Sleep no longer is a necessity! Try the soothing rays of the "Mountain Sun" machine, and refrain from it.—"Men excluded."

This latest device for aiding women to beauty was shown at the first annual convention of the American Association Culture school held here.

Dr. Carl Loeb, the beauty expert from Germany, who invented the machine and gave a demonstration of its possibilities, says that a half-hour spent basking in the artificial rays, will produce the same effect as eight hours of sleep.

"Wrinkles, skin diseases, rickets and anemia," said Dr. Loeb, "are some of the ailments that can be cured by the machine, whose rays are unlike those of any other device. These rays, that I perfected four years ago after years of research and study, are almost exact replicas of the sun.

"And sleep has a substitute now. Those long hours spent in bed are a waste of time. Just one short half hour of treatment, and the patient has the equivalent of eight hours of sleep.

Problem of Providing Home for Armenian Refugees Big Task

GENEVA.—The vexed problem of finding a new home for the 250,000 Armenian refugees who are still homeless in the Near East has been referred by the league of nations to a new international committee headed by Dame Rachel Crowdy, an Englishwoman, who has achieved a considerable international reputation as head of the league's social section.

The whole question is thus taken out of the hands of Dr. Nansen and the Near East Relief, who recently collaborated in a comprehensive survey of the situation and recommended an international loan to provide transportation back to Russia for a large part of the refugees.

Miss Crowdy and her associates of the new committee will visit Russian Armenia early in the spring, with a group of Americans, to study the Nansen recommendations.

Plans for deepening famed Lake Geneva to make the Rhone navigable as far as the Swiss frontier have been made.

"Satan in Sables" with
is the story of a reckless Russian prince who walked the primrose path, to the merry tune of aching hearts.

But one day a dancing bit of a girl flits across his pathway—and the bright lights lose their glamour.

How she lured him—baffled him—seemed always just beyond his reach—and then—came back into his life like a ray of sunshine

—all this is powerfully pictured in the new WARNER picture—"Satan in Sables."

Dress Rehearsal for "That's That" On Christmas Day

Dress rehearsal for the musical comedy, "That's That," to be staged in the high school auditorium next Monday and Tuesday evenings under the auspices of Harding chapter, Order of De Molay, will be held on the school stage at 3 o'clock Christmas afternoon.

Ticket sale and the campaign in general was discussed at a meeting of the De Molay members, held in the grill room of the Masonic temple, last evening.

The choruses, which have been rehearsing separately, are working with the principals this week. The song and dance work of the leading characters is a strong feature in "That's That." All the music was written especially for the show.

John Rumberger plays the leading male role of Kenneth Jones, son of a millionaire, who is carrying on a delightful romance under concealed identity at an exclusive Palm Beach hotel. "Maybe Lady Luck Will Smile on Me." "What's Become of the Chaperon" and "The Dream That I Dreamed About You," featuring Verne Lucas Wright, leading lady, are three of the musical hits.

In the fun-making role, Kenneth Berg, with his original capers, will keep the audience in an uproar of laughter every minute he is on the stage. He is cast as Eddie Dewey from the "sticks," dealing in Florida real estate. Miss Mary Alice McGonigal and Glen Roberts will be Mamie Rimer and Mickey Sullivan from New York. The three comedy characters are brought together in a side-splitting song and dance number, "That's That." A dance number, "The Bowery," by Mamie and Mickey, is another big asset to the mirth section of the show.

Syd Chaplin Hits Bouncing Pace in 'Man on the Box'

During the filming of "The Man on the Box," the Warner Bros. classic of the screen, starring Syd Chaplin, which is now playing at the American theatre, there was a parade flitting to and from the set that would send any gambler dashing over to his broker's to place a large order for stock in any good bed-spring company.

Syd's first picture for Warners is said to be the funniest thing he has ever done, surpassing all his previous successes; and the prop men of his company, who are accustomed to helping on dramatic pictures, got their first lesson in what it means to make comedies. They all wore worried and abused expressions as they toted bed springs in and out of the set, for Syd broke five of them in half an hour. However, when the scene was completed, one boy passed the word to another that this bird Chaplin will never be accused of holding out on realistic stuff.

"The Man on the Box," based on the celebrated Harold MacGrath novel and play, concerns the romantic adventures of charming and wealthy Bob Warburton, and also gives Syd an opportunity to masquerade as a flirtatious maid. Those who saw him in "Charley's Aunt," are assured by reviewers in other cities that he is even funnier in his latest production.

Officers of the Salvation army today began to pack Christmas dinner baskets, which will be distributed to needy families of the East Liverpool-Wellsville-Chester - Newell district, Thursday.

Each basket will cost approximately $5, according to Field Major Joseph Hughes. The baskets will vary in size, depending upon the number in each family. According to Salvation Army officials, sufficient food is packed in each basket to provide not only the dinner but also supper for the ordinary family. The baskets to families in East Liverpool, Newell and Chester will be given out from the Salvation Army citadel, East Third stret, at 10 a. m. Thursday, while those for Wellsville will be distributed from the Hartman store, corner Third and Main strets.

Major Hughes has planned a brief service for the recipients of the baskets at the Saivation Ary citadel just before the distribution is made. This is in conformity with a plan which has been in effect for several years.

An invitation is extended to the public to visit the Third street citadel at 10 o'clock Thursday morning or at any time during the day to see the Christmas dinner display.

Collections for the Christmas dinner and winter relief fund yesterday totaled $195.87, which brought the total up to $2,442.11. Of yesterday's contribution, $119.35 was received through the mails, $56.27 in the street kettles and $20.25 by the committee canvassing the potteries.

CALL PHONE RATE HEARING

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Submission of a partial report by the Ohio Bell Telephone company of the inventory of its properties throughout the state marked the opening here today of the state-wide probe by the state utilities commission into the telephone rate situation.

The company values its buildings at approximately $8,000,000 and lands at about $4,000,000. Valuation of its equipment and other possessions will be submitted later during the hearing, it was announced.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Linking up of the names of Henry Ford and Hudson motor cars in market gossip led to an unusually active demand for Hudson stock in the early trading today, and the five point advance in that stock to above 107 was the feature of that period. The market as a whole moved around unsteadily, with alternate advances and declines in the principal stocks and the volume of trading of the usual holiday proportions.

Some effort was made to inject the coal strike situation and the inability of the miners and operators to arrive at a basis for the resumption of negotiations, into the stock market, and speculative selling in some stocks was credited to that factor. As a rule the stocks which opened lower on professional selling pressure were the first to rebound. The tight call money situation is generally accepted as an inevitable condition over the year-end, with the banks giving first consideration to industrial and commercial demands.

crown from the pope and putting it on his head with his own hands, young Napoleon teaching war to the great Austrian generals, all that was fine in its way, and magnificent.

The Napoleon of the elevators lacks some of Napoleon's sensations, but he also lacks the worst of them.

Napoleon had to die on St. Helena, a prisoner of England, with stomach ulcer eating his strength and causing intense pain.

The Napoleon of the elevators will die in his bed, unless he is run over by a taxicab. He established a policy with his clicker and it endures. He has no mob to worry him by howling outside his palace window. He hasn't a plalace, and that's a great advantage.

No minister of state interferes with his plans. He can say with an assurance that Napoleon never possessed l'etat moi, meaning "I am the state." And he is, for his elevators.

The ancients revered the power that ordered the rising and the setting of the sun. Well they might.

Everything is comparative. And that power, which, by the way, never really existed, was no more impressive than the pewer of that little square shouldered Elevator Napoleon who orders the rising and falling of the elevators.

Get a job to fit your ambition, attend to it well, and it will attend to you. That's happiness.

Free Dental Examination

members of our association will gladly donate their services for a few hours every other week or so to make an examination only," Dr. Williamson said. "Each parent would then be notified as to the dental attention their child needed and urged to have it taken care of at once. The plan of employing a licensed dentist who could do this work, would be preferred, however."

The committee pointed out that many children are handicapped in their school work through defective teeth, and that experiments show that a child learns quicker and their health is improved if their teeth are sound.

"We believe that this is a step forward for the health of the school child and for the schools in general," said Dr. Williamson, "and the dentists are willing to co-operate in any move which will mean better teeth for the children."

Grant Use of Auditorium.

All members of the board expressed themselves as in accord with the recommendations of the committee, but explained that the finances of the schools were a stumbling block. President D. F. White informed the committee that the matter would be considered and an effort made to devise a plan whereby the work could be started early in the new year.

Later, President White named Members Ferguson, Weaver and Wilhelm and Superintendent of Schools C. S. McVay as members of a committee to meet with the dentists in an effort to agree upon a plan whereby a dentist may be employed by the schools. This committee will report at an early meeting of the board.

The board granted Joseph Dickey, welfare director for the Homer Laughlin China company, use of the high school auditorium, free of charge, on Wednesday or Thursday of next week for the Christmas entertainment which employes of the Laughlin pottery will tender the 75 children of the McCullough-Jerfferson County Children's home at Yellow Creek. Dickey explained that the entertainment was to be free, a silver offering to be taken during the evening going to the children.

Purchase 150 Books.

Upon recommendation of Superintendent McVay, the board authorized the purchase of 150 copies of Edward Bok's book, "The Boy Who Followed Ben Franklin," for reading purposes for pupils in the upper elementary schools. The books will cost about $100.

A communication was read from Dr. T. T. Church, Lisbon, county health commissioner, which said that the county board had excluded from the Glenmoor school children who had not been vaccinated during the last five years. The board voted to file the communication.

School teachers will receive their Christmas pay tomorrow, which marks the closing of the schools for the holiday vacation. Christmas programs will be carried out in a majority of the schools during the afternoon session which will close at 3 o'clock.

WOMAN'S LOVE WINS FREEDOM FOR ARNSTEIN

Broker Leaves Leavenworth to Meet His Wife, Fanny Brice.

SLATE IS CLEAN

Awaits Reunion With Children Who Know Nothing of Past.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Dec. 22.—Nicky Arnstein came back today to the world from which almost two years ago the United States government shut him out.

He came back with society's slate against him wiped clean and with 72 days off for good behavior because a woman's love proved stronger than the demand that he be made to pay for other sins of which he stood accused.

Tonight in Chicago he will meet that woman—Fanny Brice of the "Follies," of the vaudeville stage, and now of the "Music Box Revue," and their children, the woman who, when she married him "for better or for worse" in 1917, meant it literally and proved it, the children who never have been told their father was in prison.

Yet, with this pleasing reunion ahead and in face of the season of forgiveness and good will, Nicky came out of prison in a truculent mood, unchastened by months on end of shoveling ashes and breathing vague threats of telling what he knows and making any number of people sweat for what he has been through.

It was in the early dawn that the gates of Leavenworth prison opened, spewed forth nine men into the long flight of steps that lead to prison, then closed with a clang.

Threatens Exposure.

Eight of the men, grotesquely attired in the misfit outfits which Uncle Sam gives those who have paid their debts behind the bars or in the out-of-date garments they wore when they entered the prison, ran capering down the steps, shouting hilariously.

That was Nicky Arnstein. Tall, slim, elegant, unhurried and immaculately dressed in the new dark overcoat, black fedora, pin-stripe grey suit and gleaming black shoes which Fanny Brice had sent him, he sauntered leisurely along behind the others.

Nicky, middle-aged, a little more grey about the tempies, smiled a bit superciliously behind the stiletto-pointed black mustache he had been permitted to cultivate as his release neared.

"You can quote me as saying I'm glad to be out of that place," he said to reporters.

Then he cast a vindictive glance over his shoulder at the massive stone walls he had just left.

"That warden certainly is going to know I've been there," he added. "No, I'm not telling just what I mean by that. After the holidays are over and I've seen my lawyers—to find out just how far I can go—I'm going to tell a few things.

Survivors of Shenandoah Crash Score Col. Mitchell

Senior Officer and Others Deny Dirigible Was Improperly Equipped and Insist Wreck Was Due to "Act of God."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Survivors of the Shenandoah disaster had their final inning today before the naval court of inquiry and through Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosendahl, senior officer, their spokesman, flatly denied the dirigible had been improperly equipped or operated and insisted the wreck was due to "an act of God."

In a lengthy final argument Rosendahl summed up all of the evidence secured during the extended investigation. He arraigned certain witnesses, including Colonel William Mitchell, who testified the giant air liner was improperly operated and denied Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne went on the fatal flight under protest.

"From the direct examination of Colonel Mitchell is was very apparent to us he had no expert knowledge of his own relative to the disaster. His testimony substantiated fully an utterance of his course that 'any one who read Mitchell's statement would recognize that it is a fine play of words that really means nothing.'"

Rosendahl insisted there was no evidence to show Lansdowne protested the flight because of fear of the weather in the early part of September when the flight took place.

"To believe then the alleged reluctance of Commander Lansdowne to carry out the flight as ordered—that such an officer would jeopardize his crew and the ship wilfully and knowingly—not only approaches the height of absurdity but slanders the dead," he said.

Rosendahl reviewed expert testimony to show the Shenandoah was not weakened by corrosion or the strain caused by breaking away from her mooring mast at Lakehurst in 1924 and defended the new valve system which was criticized by many witnesses.

Frank Munsey Dies

office, learned how to handle a key and was sent to Augusta, then an important publishing center. But he quickly came to hate telegraph because it confined him so close and strove to get out and get a job in some other line. But there were no other jobs available.

Gradually the publishing germ entered his blood. He drew up elaborate plans for a magazine and submitted them to various moneyed people. But "an enterprise as hazardous as publishing to be managed by a man without practical experience, did not appeal to them.

Founder of Argosy Magazine.

Finally he laid his scheme before a stock broker who agreed to supply $2,500. Munsey promptly invested $500 he had saved in manuscripts and came to New York. He had $40 when he arrived on a cold bleak day in the winter of 1882.

He engaged an office and invested his capital in an $8 table, a couple of cheap chairs, some pens and a bottle of ink. His first piece of writing was a letter to the broker up in Maine asking for the promised $2,500. Three days later he collapsed over one of the new tables when he received a letter telling him the broker had changed his mind.

But with all his troubles ahead of him he started to work and two months later issued the first number of the Argosy magazine, an illustrated weekly paper of eight pages for boys and girls. Horatio Alger, Jr., was one of the contributors.

Then a publisher offered to bring out the magazine in his own name, retaining Munsey as editor and manager. Two monts later the first number appeared. Three months after the publisher failed, owing Munsey $1,000.

Acquired New York Herald.

Four years later he looked back on 1,460 days of drudgry and, reviewing his finances, knew that he owed $16,000. But he just begun his first serial, "Afloat in a Great City," and readers were beginning to come into the Argosy. In five months he spent $95,000 advertising the magazine and distributed 11,500,000 sample copies of the Argosy. He had arrived.

Forty years later Frank Munsey had become one of the foremost publishers in the United States, numbering his newspapers and magazines by the score and his wealth by millions.

His most notable achievement in the newspaper field came in February, 1920, when he acquired the New York Herald, one of the oldest newspapers in the country and merged it with the New York Sun, which he had purchased in 1916.

The merged publication was called the Sun and the New York Herald for a time and then changed simply to the Herald. At the same time the Evening Sun, another Munsey paper, was changed to the Sun.

He Never Married.

In addition to the Argosy and Munsey magazines, Mr. Munsey acquired the Scrap Book, the Railroad Magazine, the All-Story Magazine, the Ocean, and others, and owned newspapers in New York, Washington, Boston, Philadlephia and Baltimore. His investments were extensive in other fields.

He never married and lived for many years at one of New York's fashionable hotels and maintained an estate at Elizabeth, N. J.

Early in 1924, after several months' negotiation, begun by Mr. Munsey with the intention of buying the New York Tribune, Mr. Munsey sold the New York Herald to Ogden Reid, owner of the Tribune, and the merged paper, bearing the name of New York Herald and New York Tribune, made its bow to New York on March 19 of that year.

F. A. Munsey, Once $40 Month Clerk, Leaves $40,000,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Frank A. Munsey began his career on a $40 a month grocer's clerk, establishing a fortune of more than $40,000,000 through the genius of his subsequent publishing ventures.

Although at various points in his career he owned as many as 17 newspapers and 10 magazines, Munsey had but two daily publications and two periodicals when he died today.

They were the New York Sun, New York Evening Telegram, Argosy-All-Story Magazine and Munsey's Magazine.

'No, No, Nanette,' Will Come to Ceramic Enroute to East

John Hyams and Leila McIntyre Head Talent Chosen for Presentation of Musical Comedy Triumph.

It is only once in a very great while that local amusement friends are stirred to any particular degree of enthusiasm such as has marked the state of feeling which has prevailed ever since it became known that "No, No, Nanette" was coming.

The inquiries about seats is conclusive evidence enough that their remarkably fine musical comedy will enjoy a profitable engagement and will be accorded a deserving welcome. East Liverpool theatregoers will be especially glad to have a chance to enjoy the manifold pleasure features of "No, No, Nanette," an entertainment rich in tunefulness, replete with dance novelties and above all else, telling a consistently funny story, one fraught with convulsive laughter.

The management of the Ceramic theatre was fortunate in getting in on the "ground floor' as it were, as "No, no, Nanette" comes following its six months' triumph in Philadelphia, and 28 weeks in Boston, after a solid year's run in Chicago, and before New York gave its overwhelming approval and has bidden it to remain there until goodness knows when, as all signs point to its breaking musical comedy records in the Metropolis.

The "No, No, Nanette" company which will be seen here, Thursday night, Dec. 31, is one of the five organizations found necessary to cover the demand from coast to coast, any of which is absolutely guaranteed to be the equal of the others in every respect. The greatest care has been exercised in the chosen talent which is headed by John Hyams and Leila McIntyre, among the greatest favorites, and which includes the names of many of the foremost musical comedy celebrities. The chorus is one of special distinction and the production an exact duplicate whith regards to elaborate scenic arrangements and the beautiful costume creations which are so greatly admired.

SCHOOL CHIEF STATES VIEWS

H. C. Leonard Declares Few in State Will Close Doors.

"Few schools in the state of Ohio will be compelled to close during the present fiscal term on account of a lack of finances, and none will have to close in Columbiana county," declared County Superintendent of Schools H. C. Leonard. "There has been a lot said about school finances of late, but considerable of this talk is without foundation."

"There has been some talk about certain schools in Columbiana county running short of finances, but the records in the office of the county board of education now show that so far as the local situation is concerned, ample money is available for the operation of all schools during the present term.

"There are 2,500 school districts in Ohio," Mr. Leonard explained. "No exempted village schools in any county in Ohio are closed and none will close. We have this information from the state department of education. No village or centralized schools in Ohio are closed, and no school district maintaining a high school in any part of Ohio is closed for the lack of funds. There are less than a dozen districts out of the 2,500 in the state that are anticipating financial trouble that might lead to a shortening of the terms.

"In the districts where they have the best schools and where the schools are costing the most they are being adequately financed," Mr. Leonard stated, "but it is easy to understand. The school sentiment that provides good schools also provides the money to maintain them.

"In the district that has permitted its schools to close all kinds of excuses and reasons are being given. They blame it on the state department of education, the county board of education and the county superintendent, the state teachers' association and the state laws.

"None of these are valid excuses. The financial distress of the schools of the state has been over press agented and exaggerated. The department of education has made a thorough and complete survey of the state and has found that all the districts except a very few of the 2,500 districts are adequately financing their schools, and those few districts that are now doing so could finance them if the people really believed in schools and education.

"I am glad to say that Columbiana county is in excellent shape so far as school finances are concerned. Some districts could use more money, but that is always the case everywhere. Many districts put over the three mill levy at the November election, and those who did not vote on the proposition have sufficient school funds to carry on the educational work of the district."

TWO MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

Unless there is more activity displayed between now and the close of the year the record for marriage licenses issued this month will fall below the record for December 1924. So far only 29 licenses have been granted by Judge Lodge Riddle, and in December 1924, 41 licenses were granted.

Only two licenses was issued so far this week, that to William Gibson and Mary Hickman, both of East Palestine.

A license has also been issued to Dr. Lea A. Cobbs of Salem, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Cobbs of Damascus, a graduate of the Cincinnati Medical school and now an intern in the Central Clinic at Salem and Miss Elizabeth J. Gerner, of Salem, but a former resident of Cleveland.

IMPROVEMENT OF ROAD IS ASSURED

Improvement of the Unity-Springfield road is now secured, according to an agreement approved by the county commissioners.

During a conference of Unity township people, headed by Attorney L. M. Kyes of East Palestine with the commissioners, in which State Division Highway Engineer Fred Swineford of Ravenna took part, a sum of approximately $5,000 is availazle for the improvement of the road before a permanent top is built.

Property owners along this road will donate about $3,000 for this work, and the state will put about $2,000 or more into the project. A slag road will be built for the present, and then within the next two years it is likely a concrete top will be spread. This will give another improved highway to connect Columbiana county with Mahoning.

Calcutta Farmers' Institute Sponsored By Community Units

Recent farmers' institute, held at Calcutta, was sponsored by the farm bureau, community league, school pupils and teachers, churches and community at large and not by the Calcutta grange, officials of the institute announced today. The grange co-operated in the institute but the success of the affair was due largely to the hearty co-operation of the community at large, Page Myler said.

Case Appealed.

The case of C. H. Johnson against George M. Aten which was tried in the court of Justice of the Peace J. W. Riley of Wellsville for an account for $260.50 for work and labor, has been appealed to common pleas court by Aten. Judgment by default was entered by the lower court in favor of Johnson. The defendant then took an appeal the transcript having just been filed.

HEAVY DOCKET FOR COURT TERM

The January term of court gives early promise of being one of the most active in recent years, according to the bar docket which has just been issued by Clerk of Court Frank Ballantine.

A total of 695 cases are listed in the new docket as against 697 in the September docket, but since the January docket has been issued about a dozen additional cases have been filed, many of which are to come up during the January term of court.

Over 50 cases have been filed with Clerk Ballantine which will come before the January grand jury which will go into session at 11 o'clock, January 4th. An additional number of criminal cases remain to be received by Mr. Ballantine from the East Liverpool and Wellsville courts, and it is also said that a number of justices of the peace throughout the county have grand jury cases on their dockets for which no transcripts have been filed.

"Every criminal transcript should be filed with the clerk of courts before Dec. 30th," announced Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Brookes Tuesday. "This is necessary, as this office desires to get in touch with all witnesses before they are summoned. There is no use in delaying the filing of transcripts, and they should be filed within a few days after disposition of cases has been had in the lower courts," Mr. Brookes declared.

TWO TOWNSHIPS PLAN ROAD WORK

West and Elkrun townships have laid the foundation for the first work on their secondary road system, and have announced their plans to the county commissioners. Work is to begin on several of these roads in January.

Elkrun township trustees propose to use the money they obtain through the Green law, or $1,000 now in the county treasury awaiting order of the trustees on the one mile of the "Fingerboard" hill road, beginning at Elkton and working south one mile. An assessment of not more than $2,000 per mile is allowed under the Green law in addition of $1,000 already provided by the state.

In West township, the trustees have agreed to begin work on a mile road extending north of Bayard paralleling the C. & P. railroad to the Columbiana-Stark county line.

Trustees of both townships appeared before the county commissioners Monday afternoon and lines for the grading have been ordered prepared by County Surveyor Lloyd C. Kirk.

Harmon Paroled.

Upon the recommendation of Justice of the Peace P. V. Mackall of East Liverpool, the county commissioners have paroled Lorenzo Harmon, charged with a violation of the liquor laws. He has paid a part of the fine of $500 and the costs in the case, and has made an agreement with the commissioners for discounting the balance of the fine.

Partition Petition Granted.

In the case of Homer C. Hilliard against Lydia A. Hilliard, an action brought to quiet the title to certain real estate, there has been a trial to the court, and a decree has been granted the plaintiff as prayed for, and at the costs of the plaintiff.

Discuss Improvements.

State Division Highway Engineer Fred Swineford of Ravenna, who succeeded W. C. Fawcett of Martins Ferry, following the promotion of the latter to state locating engineer, was in Lisbon Monday, and today with County Surveyor Lloyd C. Kirk went over plans for road improvements in this county next year.

Irvin McGee Dead.

The funeral of Irvin W. McGee, aged 76 years, formerly of East Liverpool, who died at Massillon Sunday, will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard McGee, East Lincoln way, Lisbon, at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. He is survived by his widow, six sons and one daughter, the widow and his sons George and Lee residing in East Liverpool. Mr. McGee was a native of Clarion county, Pa., but took up his residence in East Liverpool 35 years ago.

Judgment Obtained.

Judgment by default for $2,518.44 has been obtained by the First National bank of Salem in its action against William W. Ladd and others, in an action just head in common pleas court, and a decree of foreclosure of mortgage and the sale of the premises has been ordered. Costs in this action have been assessed against the defendants.

New Service Launched.

Free transportation is now being provided by the Y. & O. railroad for its passengers from its station at Lisbon to the court house. Y. & O. passengers are also given like service going from the public square, Lisbon to the Y. & O. station.

The new service was inaugurated Monday, and will be continued permanently, it is said.

$25,000 in Jewelry Found in Spare Wheel Of Marseilles Taxi

MARSEILLES — Jewelry valued at $25,000 was found in the spare wheel of a taxicab by the police. A woman recently arrived by steamer from the Orient, took a taxi to her hotel. She left jewels valued at $25,000 in the taxi when she left it at her destination.

The woman reported her loss to the police. All garages of the city were searched in vain. One of the detectives was returning to headquarters in a taxi when a tire blew out and the driver said he could go no further. The detective asked the driver why he could not put on the spare tire, and becoming suspicious investigated.

It was found that the chauffeur had placed the jewels in the spare tire for want of a better hiding place. He was arrested and confessed.

FIND BODY IN VACANT HOUSE

Heart Failure Believed to Have Caused Man's Death.

County Coroner John M. Van Fossan, of East Palestine, was scheduled to hold an inquest this afternoon at the John Haugh funeral home over the body of Charles Devie, aged 30, of Pittsburgh, which was found yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the top of a flight of steps in a vacant building at 1321 Main street. He had been dead only a few minutes.

Devie had been an employe of the Pittsburgh Coretruction company, which operates a sand and gravel plant on the site of the old Carroll-Porter Boiler works, on the river bank at Twentieth street.

Sunday night, according to police, he was preparing to go to Pittsburgh. He had purchased a ticket and had sent his trunks ahead. Yesterday morning he was reported to have been seen around Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, aimlessly walking around the streets.

Shirtly before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon he same out of a Main street restaurant near Thirteenth, and went down the street.

A short time later, Earl Densmore, entering the building at 1321 Main to inspect the premises, found the body at the top of the first flight of steps. The street door was standing open.

Densmore immediately notified Chief of Police John Fultz, and the body was removed to the John Haugh funeral home, in Seventh street.

An employe of the construction company later identified the man.

Davie, according to police, had no family, although a brother is living in Pittsburgh. The latter was notified.

The railroad ticket which Devie had purchased, as well as his watch and other valuables, were all in his pockets when the body was found.

A preliminary examination by Chief John Fultz failed to reveal any signs of violence. This, together with the fact that his pockets had not been rifled, prompts the theory, on the face of the finding, of death following an attack of heart failure.

Pending word from the dead man's brother in Pittsburgh, the body will be kept here.

$2,500 ALIMONY AWARDED BY JURY

Alimony has been placed at $2,500 in the divorce case tried before Judge James G. Moore in which a decree was granted Margaret G. Rehman against her husband, John D. Rehman. The plaintiff was represented by Lones, Hill & Davidson of East Liverpool, while the defendant was represented by Attorney W. A. O'Grady of Wellsville. In this case there was a trial to the court, and the decree was granted the plaintiff on the grounds of extreme cruelty.

Mrs. Rehman was then restored to her maiden name, Margaret G. Wilke.

As alimony, the court has set the amount at $2,500, which is the largest judgment of the kind handed down in divorce court in this county in several years. The defendant is also to pay the costs in this case.

May Move High School-Alumni Court Contest Ahead One Day

New Year's Eve Date May Hurt Attendance

Shift Can Easily be Made, According to Director Boone, Because School Opponents Will All be Local Players; Should Meet With Approval of Fans, He Believes.

THE advisability of moving ahead by one day high school's next cage contest, which will send them against the Alumni, is being considered today by Athletic Director O. V. Boone and Coach Lorah.

The tussle with the graduates is down on the books for Thursday, December 31, New Year's eve.

In the opinion of Director Boone, there are quite likely to be a number of other attractions on that night which will be bound to detract from the gate at the high school game.

Inasmuch as there will be no inconvenience to anyone connected with the transaction, because the Blue and White's opponents will be all local players and consequently, as able to play on Wedensday as on Thursday, the proposed change in dates at present appears very feasable in the eyes of school authorities.

The shift also will probably meet with the approval of fans who thus would be able to take in both the game and keep their New Year's eve engagements.

Lorah's passers will be idle for only a short time, probably from Friday until Monday, with brief sessions being scheduled prior to the game with the ex-school stars. Their fine showing against Sam Taylor's Franklin & Marshall quintet here last week indicated clearly that the youngsters have the stuff and, barring accidents, should make this season one of the best in recent years.

They were playing out of their class when they took on the Lancaster delegation, and, besides, it was their first taste of battle this year. Despite these handicops, they gave the visitors the toughest scrap they've had this season.

MUSCATINE, Iowa, Dec. 22.—"Ethel XI," 1924 champion of both 340 and 510 class hydroplanes and holder of the world straightaway record of 48.92 MPH made at Oshkosh, Wis., July 5, 1924, has been sold by Charles P. Hanley to G. A. Stillson of St. Petersburg, Fla. The boat has been shipped and the new owner expects to compete with it in Florida regattas this winter. Mr. Hanley, former president of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association, will go as a representative of that organization to the National Motor Boat show in New York Jan. 22-30 to look over the fastest engines, hulls and accessories with the idea of creating a new champion.

IRONDALE FIVE COPS INAUGURAL

Irondale high school opened its court season on the home floor by defeating Hanoverton, 16 to 14. The Salineville girls won from an Alumni sextet, 18 to 0. An extra period was necessary to determine the outcome of the boys' game at the end of the fourth quarter. Hicks shot a field goal in the last few seconds of the extra period and his two points won the game.

Hicks and Ferguson made four and eight points, respectively, of the Salineville total.

The Irondale teams will play their next regular games at Salineville on Jan. 9.

Golf Thrilled Thousands During 1925 Campaign; Louise Fordyce, Ohio Star, Rises to New Heights

The five major champions of the golf world, Miss Glenna Collett, drawing the center of the spotlight as she should.

By Norman E. Brown.

A careful study of the sporting records of the dying year of 1925 leaves me with the impression that golf furnished more thrills, considered in the light of their settings, elements of surprise, and general interest, than any of the other leading branches.

First of all was the startling showing of Miss Glenna Collett.

Invading Europe for the first time she fairly stunned the continent with her masterful play. Lack of knowledge of British game, turf conditions and the strain of facing, possibly, both Miss Joyce Wethered and Cecil Leitsch handicapped her in the British tourney, but she met many of the same field in the French women's open championship tourney a short time later and won that title.

Returning to this country she again proved herself the queen of the U. S. golfing fraternity by playing her way through the most brilliant field produced for national competition in the women's ranks.

Where Miss Collett failed, Long Jim Barnes succeeded. A perennial seeker of the British open Barnes played his way through that tourney and won it. The interest in this tourney was increased by the threat hurled by MacDonald Smith, who played spectacular golf until the final round, only to fall down when a low score would have carried him above Barnes.

Smith Grabs a Title, Too.

Smith later won the western open title by playing the brilliant brand of golf he delivered early in the British meet.

Back her eat home, Bobby Jones, Atlanta wonder and one of the greatest tournament players the Scottish game has produced, set out to win back the national open championship, which he had held in 1923.

Up to the finals he climbed his way, with a brilliant exhibition of golf—only to find "Wee Willie" MacFarlane, waiting for him—to challenge his right to the crown. Over 36 extra holes these men battled for supremacy. And when the fiercest battle ever witnessed for the open title was ended MacFarlane had won.

Determined to hold his amateur titles won in 1924, Jones entered the amateur tourney. Star after star, men who had repeatedly foiled Jones' efforts in tournament play, fell by the wayside in that meet. At the closing round it was an unknown, Mr. Watts Gunn, a fellow townsman and personal friend of Bobby's, who challenged his right to the title. Jones won, however.

The national pro tourney threatened to be a tame affair, due to the absence of several of the leading tourney players from it. But the wonderful golf displayed by Walter Hagen carried the tourney into the limelight.

The season saw also the return to turney play of Alexa Stirling Frazer, Atlanta wizard. And her brilliant play caused experts to rate her second in the year's rankings. She won the medal play honors in the national tourney and played through to the finals, only to lose to Miss Collett.

Ohio saw Miss Louise Fordyce, Youngstown star, soar to dizzy heights. Placed ninth last year she was given fourth place in the 1925 rankings.

The pluck shown by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd in her efforts to hold her 1924 national title, and the play of Mary Browne, were other bright features.

Winning Title In Buckeye Court Circuit Will Be Man-Size Task

Ohio Wesleyan, Ohio U., and Wittenberg All Declare Their Prospects are Good; Cincinnati Has Veteran Team.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Winning the basketball championship in the newly organized Buckeye Athletic association promises to be a real man-sized job plus, this season with five of the six teams in the association boldly admitting that they consider their prospects good.

Ohio University boasts Capt. Charley Wright and a largely veteran squad and points to its near victory over Ohio State in the opening game of its season. Wittenberg has Capt. "Reed" Armstrong and an abundance of fast and husky material. Ohio Wesleyan has Capt. William Turney and Lamme, great point getters last season, and good recruits.

Coach Boyd Chambers at Cincinnati has a squad of veteran giants with eight varsity players six feet or more in height. Pre-season dope on Denison is that the Big Red will have an experienced, rangy, fast and heavy team.

Miami, through the irony of fate, should win the Buckeye association basketball title for it is the only school where prospects are regarded as doubtful. Coach Roy Tillotson has but one letterman and his squad is not husky. Miami has a number of experienced players, however, who may hit a stride that will prove plenty hot for their Buckeye playmates.

Buckeye teams are now busy with preliminary schedules, Ohio Wesleyan having eight such games, Ohio University seven, Cincinnati six, Wittenberg and Miami each three and Denison but one. Ohio Wesleyan has already played Michigan and Ohio State but will get the bulk of its pre-season practice during the university's present vacation period. The Bishops will play the Isalys at Marion, the University of Alabama at Delaware, Goodyears and Firestones at Akron. Mt. Gilead and Zanesville during holidays. Cincinnati has met Berea and Marietta and still has Cincinnati "Y," Cincinnati Gym, an Alumni team and Akron to meet before the regular season opens.

22 Alabama Players Enroute to Pacific

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 22.—Coach Wallace Wade, of Alabama, is enroute to Pasadena with 22 players for the game with Washington New Year's day. The only stop schedule will be at the Grand Canyon.

For his own family Santa Claus chooses Gifts That Last that a dollar goes farther at the jewelry store than it does anywhere else, in procuring enduring usefulness and pleasure.

For the jeweler deals in imperishables—in gifts that last, like the fidelity of a fine friendship, for as long as life itself!

Specializing in jewels, the jeweler sees to it that every article in his stock is truly a jewel. And whether it be for adornment or for utility, it must measure up to jewel-standards, in craftsmanship and integrity.

He who must coddle a lean purse or she who may indulge a fat one, both will find there the gifts they would most like to give—comfortably priced within their respective Christmas budgets.

But whatever the price, the quality is always jeweler's quality—uncompromising in its fine standards.

Ask Santa Claus! He knows!

SOME folks think of the jewelry store as the place to go, chiefly, for those gifts where expense is the second consideration.

But not Santa Claus! That canny old gift expert knows better than that!

He judges the worth of a gift not alone by what it costs, but by what it yields—in service and satisfaction. . . . And long ago, he discovered

ALLEGED BURGLAR DOES DAREDEVIL STUNTS IN VAIN SEARCH FOR LIQUOR

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—A leap from the ledge of the third story of a South End house across a six-foot areaway through the glass window into a room where two girls were sleeping, a 30-foot drop from another window to the street, the dodging of bullets from a policeman's revolver and a collapse in the street from a bullet wound in the knee—these were the highlights in the sensational chase and capture today of James L. Johnson, 27, of Hartford, Conn., who, with a companion, attempted to burgle a drug store of liquor and narcotics.

George V. Hout, 24, also of Hartford, was captured inside the drug store.

"What a fool I am, I did this for women," Johnson told police.

Two women, one a chorus girl, found in the hotel room where Johnson and Hout were stopping were questioned.

INGRAM'S SQUAD RULES FAVORITE

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"Navy Bill" Ingram and his squad of All-American eastern grid representatives ruled favorites in the mid-west today in their California conquests.

Irvin Uteritz, Michigan quarterback of two years back, joined the squad in Chicago yesterday.

The squad includes: Marks, Indiana, halfback; Farwick, Army, guard; Dilweg, Marquette, end; Hutchinson, Nebraska, center; Garbisch, Army, center; Edwards, Michigan, tackle; Slaughter, Michigan, guard; Sloane, Drake, end; Ingram, Navy, quarterback; Fisher, Indiana, tackle; Uteritz, Michigan, quarterback; Powell, Davis-Elkins, end; Davis, West Virginia, tackle; Fry, Iowa, halfback; Wycoff, Georgia Tech, fullback; Chase, Pittsburgh, tackle; Jones, Florida, quarterback and halfback; Martineau, Minnesota, halfback; Reese, Vanderbilt, halfback. C. F. Ferguson, trainer at Indiana, accompanied the team.

Jack Denies Rumored Rupture With Lawyer

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 22.—Denying reports that he had broken with his legal adviser, Ray Cannon, Milwaukee lawyer, Jack Dempsey declared today he still had under consideration a new proposition of Floyd Fitzsimmons, a mid-west promoter, to stage a Dempsey-Wills bout in 1926. "Cannon," Dempsey said, "has full charge of my legal affairs."

Grange and His Squad Heading for Florida

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Grange and the strengthened Chicago Bears have started another gold rush. They are enroute to Florida, and, subsequently New Orleans and California. The club has signed Goebel, former All-American end at Michigan; Lyman, tackle, Nebraska; Vick, former Michigan quarter, and Erickson, former W. & J. back, who starred for the Chicago Cardinals this fall.

Murrin Making W.V. U. Cage Candidates Step

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 22.—It is going to take some fast stepping on the part of other forward candidates to keep Julian Murrin, Parkersburg, off the varsity quint. Murrin's work, especially his shooting, is better than at any time during the 1925 season. Experience gained last year has given him some of the confidence he lacked at times during the campaign.

LePera Sure of Place On Mountaineer Team

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 22.—In Emory LePera, forward, West Virginia University has a cager of exceptional promise. The clever Morgantown passer is practically certain to land a regular berth on the Mountaineer squad and in presenting him, West Virginia expects to show tristate fans the best forward it has had in recent years.

Bethany to Send Team to Penn Relay Events

BETHANY, W. Va., Dec. 22.—Bethany will probably send a half-mile relay team to the Penn relays this year, having enrolled five of the fastest men in the country. The men who are able to make the relay team and go to Philadelphia in May will have to run their 220 yards in 22 seconds or better.

Eckersall to Referee Pasadena Grid Clash

PASADENA, Dec. 22. — Pasadena Rose Bowl officials have named the following officials for the Washington-Alabama game New Year's day: Eckersall, Chicago, referee; McCord, Illinois, umpire; Varnell, Chicago, head linesman; Springer, Philadelphia, field judge.

American Exhibitors Awarded Certificate At Soviet Radio Show

MOSCOW.—American exhibitors in the first Soviet Union radio exhibition jusct closed here after six months have been awarded a certificate of excellence by the jury of directors.

More than 50,000 visitors were recorded at the radio exhibition, which was part of a general scheme now being propagated by the government for the encouragement of amateur interest in the science. For this purpose the government subsidized trips by workmen from the farthest points of the Soviet union, some of them coming from Vladivostock, Turkmenistan and Archangel.

HUDSON-ESSEX CARS POPULAR

Maintains Consistent Six-cylinder Sale Leadership.

Automobile dealers in this territory, in looking over their records, are finding that 1925 is the most successful year they have ever known. In a number of lines there have been increases over 1924 of from 100 to 127 per cent, although 1924 itself was considered an active year.

The record of the year, it is said, will show that although the public regards an automobile wies less wonderment and enthusiasm than some years ago, this has been more than made up by a universal feeling that the automobile is an every day utility and necessity.

"If you want to understand something about the automobile business," points out Roy R. Birch, Hudson-Essex distributor, "just ask the real estate developer what chance there is for him to sell a home which is not equipped to house an automobile—or, in the better districts, two automobiles.

"I have been traveling around the city, and I find that two-car garages are as common as one-car garages two or three years ago. And whereas the one-car garage was an added feature then, it is emphatically standard now. It is this fact that has shown up in the exceptionally high motor registrations.

"The increased business which Hudson-Essex has enjoyed is of course one of the high spots of the year's records. Month after month, Hudson-Essex sales have continued at an even pace—and a consistently fast pace at that. It has had no new cars to introduce, and its sales appeals have been on the point of great all-around value rather than upon innovations. So, without spurts or slums, it has maintained a consistent six-cylinder leadership."

Remember the Children.
Good Toys, Brain Builders.
Napoleon of the Elevator.
The Power of Advertising.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Copyright, 1925.

The minds of children are developed by play. Toys well chosen represent not merely amusement but occupation and stimulation for the childish mind.

Children learn as they play. Boys and girls develop their minds, planing about their games, playing with, talking to and thinking about their dolls. The boy with his toy soldiers, and toy machinery, and the little girl with her dolls, her toy tea set, and her doll house, are preparing for the real work of future years.

To starve the imagination is almost as bad as to starve the stomach of a child.

To deprive a child of the toys that it needs for mental hapiness is to injure that child's chance in life.

There are more starved brains than starved bodies in this country.

It is not necessary or wise to give too mony toys. To put a little child in a playroom, crowded with playthings, more than the child can understand, grasp or deal with, is as foolish as to leave the child with no toys at all. There is reason in everything. Children can be spoiled by too many gifts, their little brains dazzled, and they can be spoiled by the lack of toys.

Every good father and mother should remember that Christmas is a day of inspiration, and that to little minds playthings are the only realities.

Make the children happy, and you contribute to their mental and physical growth.

What is power? Like Gaul, it is divided into three parts. There is intellectual power, Newton, Copernicus, Galileo and Kepler had it. There is spiritual power, possessed by those that establish new religious and persuade others to thing as they do.

Then, least glorious, there is material power, which makes other men do as you command.

Napoleon had the last, also Caesar, Alexander, Hammurabi, William the Conqueror, and thousands of others.

It is possessed, also by a Napoleon who directs the elevators in a downtown office building. He is about as tall as Napoleon, up to your shoulder, and at least twice as dignified as Napoleon. His commands are obeyed.

Many elevators go up and down. Not one goes until he clicks and gives the order. He stands straight and dignified in his uniform, never smiling, knowing that the going up and coming down of those elevators depends on him.

You ask a question and he points. No word uttered. The point tells you which elevator you must take.

Napoleon at the bridge, Napoleon ordering the gunners to fire at the ice and make the fleeing enemy sing into the cold water, Napoleon taking the

NEW YORK SUN AND TELEGRAM EDITOR-OWNER ILL 10 DAYS

Underwent Operations for Appendicitis and Peritonitis.

BORN IN MAINE

From Investment of $500 He Made Millions.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Frank Munsey, owner and editor of the New York Sun and the New York Telegram, and one of the best known and beloved publishers of the country, died at 6:30 o'clock this morning in Lenox Hill hospital where he had been ill since December 13.

One of America's Foremost Editors.

Mr. Munsey was operated on for acute appendicitis on December 13 and acute peritonitis developed. Last Sunday his condition was such that a second operation was necessary.

His condition became grave last night and it was evident to his physicians that the end was near.

He was 71 years old and spent all his life in the publishing business. He was regarded as one of America's foremost editors and a man of high character.

Mr. Munsey rallied from a sinking spell at midnight last Monday but suffered a relapse at 4 o'clock this morning.

The end came peacefully, apparently without much suffering.

Up to the final collapse, the publisher retained his faculties and spoke to those about him. He had requested that his sister, Mrs. John M. Hyde, of St. Petersburg, Fla., not be sent for because of her advanced age and enfeebled condition.

Worked as Telegrapher.

Frank Munsey was born in the little town of Mercer, Maine, on August 21, 1854. He attended the public school of Mercer but soon felt the urge to make money and left to take his first job in the country store as general utility boy.

From there he went to a telegraph

TWO ASPHYXIATED BY GAS FUMES

CINCINNATI, Dec. 22.—Finding of the bodies of William Sexton, 60 years old, and his son James, 22 years old, in their home on Bogen street, asphyxiated by the fumes from a gas heater, caused the police and health authorities to reiterate a warning urging caution in the use of gas heating appliances. Neighbors of the Sextons detecting fumes escaping from the room, forced the door and found the dead bodies.

The heater was burning, but a leak in the pipe had filled the room with gas.

Clean Up Yuletide Mail; Postoffice Closed Christmas

Not a piece of Christmas mail will remain undelivered at the East Liverpool postoffices on Christmas eve, according to plans of Postmaster J. E. McClure.

The postal force is working overtime to keep the two offices from becoming congested during the holday rush. The office is cleared before work is suspended each night, although many of the employes work until midnight.

The downtown and East End postoffices will be closed all day, Christmas, there being no deliveries by city or rural carriers. Postmaster General Harry S. New recently announced that all postal employes will eat their Christmas dinners at home this year.

Home Sold, Woman Raises Bill To Play Santa.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 22. — Mrs. Marie Siders, shy and diminutive, was on her way today to her husband and seven children on a farm near Wabash, because justice was tempered with Christmas fellowship by government officials.

Their farm was sold for the mortgage against it, and she came to Indianapolis seeking work to earn enough to make Christmas really Christmas for the seven youngsters back on the farm.

There was on work available for her. No money, Christmas in the offing, store shelves filled with Christmas joys and those seven children eagerly awaiting her return — these thoughts tormented her until, desperate, she crudely tried to raise a $1 bill to $10 to make Christmas purchases.

"Released under $2 cash bond," said U. S. Commissioner Kern. And L. F. Meredith, U. S. marshal, and Thomas E. Halls, chief of the secret service here, "chipped" in a dollar each.

A bystander carelessly dropped a $5 bill on the table and said huskily, "That will help in giving the seven kids something."

FREE DENTAL EXAMINATION OFFERED CITY SCHOOL PUPILS

Dentists Ask Board of Education to O. K. Plan.

HEALTH CAMPAIGN

Teachers Will Receive Their Christmas Pay Tomorrow.

Free dental examination for children in the elementary school was offered the board of education by a committee representing the East Liverpool-Wellsville Dental society, at a meeting of the board in the high school building last evening.

The committee was made up of Dr. Joseph T. Williamson, spokesman; D. R. R. Bode and Dr. K. D. Dotson. Dr. Williamson said that the dentists sole motive was interest in the health of the school children.

He explained that the plan of dental examination in the public schools was introduced about eight years ago, when a dentist's chair and other equipment were furnished by a women's club. The work was started but had not gone far when America entered the World war, and it was discontinued.

Suggest Employment of Dentist.

If the board can obtain the necessary funds, the dentists suggested that a licensed dentist be employed by the schools for five half days each week, whose duty it would be to make examinations, extract teeth, make fillings and do other dental work, without expense to the children. If this plan is adopted the dentists agree to furnish all the necessary material free of charge. A dentist may be employed, the board was told, for a half day each school day for $100 or $125 per month. One organization has already promised to contribute $100 for this purpose should the school board approve the plan

BOSTON, Dec. 22.—John Rockefeller Prentice, Yale student and prospective heir to the Rockefeller millions, is here to spend Christmas with his "mind pal," Miss Frances Howard, Smith college graduate and business school instructor—the "girl who helped him make good."

It was for Miss Howard's uncle, Frank Chase, that young Prentice worked five years following his suspension from Yale.

Twenty-four crippled children from the East Liverpool district were guests of the Rotary club at a Christmas party held in connection with the noon-day luncheon meeting in the banquet hall of the Y. M. C. A. today.

Each youngster was presented with a gift and a box of candy. Presents were provided for 15 others, who were unable to attend the meeting. These gifts were delivered this afternoon by Rotarians A. M. Kohler, William Bailey and Lawrence Smith.

Miss Eva Wasbutzky, assistant to H. B. Barth, secretary of the club, was presented with a wrist watch for her services during the past year, the presentation speech being made by President F. L. Wells. Boxes of candy were also presented to members of the Seven Sirens' orchestra, and their leader, Mrs. Danks Cochran, who were guests at the meeting. Deposed Official, His Face Livid and Fists Clenched, Turns on Heels and Storms Out of City Hall—Later Says he Will Probably Recall Resignation.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—Major General Smedley Butler, resigned from the United States marine corps today to continue serving Mayor Kendrick and Philadelphia as director of public safety, only to be notified a few minutes later by the mayor that his services were no longer desired.

"You put me in a hole," said the mayor as Butler informed him of his resignation from the marines.

"I smoked you out of your home. Now I know where I stand," retorted Butler as he slammed the door thus ending his sensational and stormy career as safety director of Philadelphia.

"I don't want you in my cabinet as a resigned officer," the mayor told Butler. "You put me in a hole and I have made other arrangements."

Butler's face became livid. He clenched his fists, turned on his heels and stormed out of the office.

Upon reaching his office, Butler refused to discuss the matter.

When he became calm Butler stated that he could recall his resignation and would probably do so.

Coolidge Decides To Accept World League Invitation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—President Coolidge has decided to accept the league of nations' invitation to participate in its disarmament conference, it was plainly indicated at the White House today, following the cabinet meeting.

The league's invitation is being considered from a constructive standpoint, the president told callers, and with a view to ascertaining how the United States can best co-operate with the purpose of the league in obtaining world-wide reduction of armament.

Simultaneously with this clarification of the White House attitude, there was introduced in both houses of congress at noon resolutions endorsing the proposed gathering, and authorizing Mr. Coolidge appoint the necessary American delegates.

Democrats sponsored the authorization in both senate and house.

TWO SOLONS WILL DEMAND CAPS FOR FIREMEN IF POLICE GET VISORS

Sauce for Goose Is Sauce for Gander, Is Attitude of Councilmen Kerr and Farrall on Controversy.

Should the ordinance authorizing purchase of caps for members of the police force be placed on third reading at the tomorrow evening's session of the city solons, another measure, authorizing the safety director to purchase caps for members of the fire department, will be introduced by Solons N. P. Kerr and Thomas Farrall.

Councilmen Kerr and Farrall have opposed the use of city funds to purchase caps for patrolmen, contending that headwear is part of the policeman's uniform. A state examiner recently ruled that the law does not permit the city to purchase uniforms for policemen.

Members of the police force declare that their caps always have been purchased by the city, but heretofore legislation authorizing the expenditure was never necessary. The state examiner recently announced that council must approve legislation to purchase equipment for the police.

The ordinance was placed on first and second reading by a vote of five to two, Solons Chambers, Larcombe, Rowe, Eardley and Hayes approving it, while Kerr and Farrall opposed it.

"If the city is going to buy caps for the policemen, it is no more than fair that they should be purchased for members of the fire department," said Councilman Kerr today. The ordinance has been drafted by Solicitor Brokaw and will be introduced Wednesday evening if the other ordinance is passed on third and final reading.

LA FOLLETTE WILL MAKE BOW AS INSURGENT BY OPPOSING WOODLOCK

Young Bob Will Carry "Declaration of Independence" Into Effect Against New Yorker.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Young Bob LaFollette will make his senatorial debut as an insurgent by opposing the appointment of Thomas F. Woodlock, of New York, to the interstate commerce commission, it was learned today.

Upon Woodlock's appointment, young LaFollette will carry into effect the "declaration of independence" which he delivered to the Republican leaders of the senate a week ago when admitted to party membership.

Although the nomination of Woodlock will not be considered until after the Christmas vacation, administration leaders already are concerned over its fate because of the charge that President Coolidge entered "a deal" with Democrats by sending the appointment to the senate along with the nomination of Richard V. Taylor, of Alabama. The naming of the southerner, it was said; was done to alleviate Democratic opposition to Woodlock, confirmation of whose appointment a year ago was blocked by Democratic members of the senate interstate commerce committee. The charge was flatly denied by administration senators and Senator Underwood, D., of Alabama, who recommended Taylor, but is aroused considerable Democratic opposition toward the Woodlock nomination.

In announcing his opposition to the New Yorker, young LaFollette revealed that he was following directly in his father's footsteps on this particular issue. The elder LaFollette, as a member of the senate interstate commerce committee, helped to block Woodlock's confirmation last March.

To deprive a child of the toys that it needs for mental hapiness is to injure that child's chance in life.

There are more starved brains than starved bodies in this country.

It is not necessary or wise to give too mony toys. To put a little child in a playroom, crowded with playthings, more than the child can understand, grasp or deal with, is as foolish as to leave the child with no toys at all. There is reason in everything. Children can be spoiled by too many gifts, their little brains dazzled, and they can be spoiled by the lack of toys.

Every good father and mother should remember that Christmas is a day of inspiration, and that to little minds playthings are the only realities.

Make the children happy, and you contribute to their mental and physical growth.

What is power? Like Gaul, it is divided into three parts. There is intellectual power. Newton, Copernicus, Galileo and Kepler had it. There is spiritual power, possessed by those that establish new religious and persuade others to thing as they do.

Then, least glorious, there is material power, which makes other men do as you command.

Napoleon had the last, also Caesar, Alexander, Hammurabi, William the Conqueror, and thousands of others.

It is possessed, also by a Napoleon who directs the elevators in a downtown office building. He is about as tall as Napoleon, up to your shoulder, and at least twice as dignified as Napoleon. His commands are obeyed.

Many elevators go up and down. Not one goes until he clicks and gives the order. He stands straight and dignified in his uniform, never smiling, knowing that the going up and coming down of those elevators depends on him.

You ask a question and he points. No word uttered. The point tells you which elevator you must take.

NEW YORK SUN AND TELEGRAM EDITOR-OWNER ILL 10 DAYS

Underwent Operations for Appendicitis and Peritonitis.

BORN IN MAINE

From Investment of $500 He Made Millions.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Frank Munsey, owner and editor of the New York Sun and the New York Telegram, and one of the best known and beloved publishers of the country, died at 6:30 o'clock this morning in Lenox Hill hospital where he had been ill since December 13.

One of America's Foremost Editors.

Mr. Munsey was operated on for acute appendicitis on December 13 and acute peritonitis developed. Last Sunday his condition was such that a second operation was necessary.

His condition became grave last night and it was evident to his physicians that the end was near.

He was 71 years old and spent all his life in the publishing business. He was regarded as one of America's foremost editors and a man of high character.

Mr. Munsey rallied from a sinking spell at midnight last Monday but suffered a relapse at 4 o'clock this morning.

The end came peacefully, apparently without much suffering.

Up to the final collapse, the publisher retained his faculties and spoke to those about him. He had requested that his sister, Mrs. John M. Hyde, of St. Petersburg, Fla., not be sent for because of her advanced age and enfeebled condition.

Worked as Telegrapher.

Frank Munsey was born in the little town of Mercer, Maine, on August 21, 1854. He attended the public school of Mercer but soon felt the urge to make money and left to take his first job in the country store as general utility boy.

From there he went to a telegraph

TWO ASPHYXIATED BY GAS FUMES

CINCINNATI, Dec. 22.—Finding of the bodies of William Sexton, 60 years old, and his son James, 22 years old, in their home on Bogen street, asphyxiated by the fumes from a gas heater, caused the police and health authorities to reiterate a warning urging caution in the use of gas heating appliances. Neighbors of the Sextons detecting fumes escaping from the room, forced the door and found the dead bodies.

The heater was burning, but a leak in the pipe had filled the room with gas.

Clean Up Yuletide Mail; Postoffice Closed Christmas

Not a piece of Christmas mail will remain undelivered at the East Liverpool postoffices on Christmas eve, according to plans of Postmaster J. E. McClure.

The postal force is working overtime to keep the two offices from becoming congested during the holiday rush. The office is cleared before work is suspended each night, although many of the employes work until midnight.

The downtown and East End postoffices will be closed all day, Christmas, there being no deliveries by city or rural carriers. Postmaster General Harry S. New recently announced that all postal employes will eat their Christmas dinners at home this year.

Home Sold, Woman Raises Bill To Play Santa.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 22. — Mrs. Marie Siders, shy and diminutive, was on her way today to her husband and seven children on a farm near Wabash, because justice was tempered with Christmas fellowship by government officials.

Their farm was sold for the mortgage against it, and she came to Indianapolis seeking work to earn enough to make Christmas really Christmas for the seven youngsters back on the farm.

There was on work available for her. No money, Christmas in the offing, store shelves filled with Christmas joys and those seven children eagerly awaiting her return — these thoughts tormented her until, desperate, she crudely tried to raise a $1 bill to $10 to make Christmas purchases.

"Released under $2 cash bond," said U. S. Commissioner Kern. And L. F. Meredith, U. S. marshal, and Thomas E. Halls, chief of the secret service here, "chipped" in a dollar each.

A bystander carelessly dropped a $5 bill on the table and said huskily, "That will help in giving the seven kids something."

FREE DENTAL EXAMINATION OFFERED CITY SCHOOL PUPILS

Dentists Ask Board of Education to O. K. Plan.

HEALTH CAMPAIGN

Teachers Will Receive Their Christmas Pay Tomorrow.

Free dental examination for children in the elementary school was offered the board of education by a committee represenfing the East Liverpool-Wellsville Dental society, at a meeting of the board in the high school building last evening.

The committee was made up of Dr. Joseph T. Williamson, spokesman; D. R. R. Bode and Dr. K. D. Dotson. Dr. Williamson said that the dentists sole motive was interest in the health of the school children.

He explained that the plan of dental examination in the public schools was introduced about eight years ago, when a dentist's chair and other equipment were furnished by a women's club. The work was started but had not gone far when America entered the World war, and it was discontinued.

Suggest Employment of Dentist.

If the board can obtain the necessary funds, the dentists suggested that a licensed dentist be employed by the schools for five half days each week, whose duty it would be to make examinations, extract teeth, make fillings and do other dental work, without expense to the children. If this plan is adopted the dentists agree to furnish all the necessary material free of charge. A dentist may be employed, the board was told, for a half day each school day for $100 or $125 per month. One organization has already promised to contribute $100 for this purpose should the school board approve the plan

BOSTON, Dec. 22.—John Rockefeller Prentice, Yale student and prospective heir to the Rockefeller millions, is here to spend Christmas with his "mind pal," Miss Frances Howard, Smith college graduate and business school instructor—the "girl who helped him make good."

It was for Miss Howard's uncle, Frank Chase, that young Prentice worked five years following his suspension from Yale.

Friendship between the student and the instructor is "intellectual," according to Miss Howard.

"I wouldn't have a member of my family marry a Rockefeller—the difference of worldly position is too great to permit a happy marriage," said Chase, the uncle.

"I SMOKED YOU OUT OF YOUR HOLE," IS RETORT AS DOOR IS SLAMMED

Deposed Official, His Face Livid and Fists Clenched, Turns on Heels and Storms Out of City Hall—Later Says he Will Probably Recall Resignation.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—Major General Smedley Butler, resigned from the United States marine corps today to continue serving Mayor Kendrick and Philadelphia as director of public safety, only to be notified a few minutes later by the mayor that his services were no longer desired.

"You put me in a hole," said the mayor as Butler informed him of his resignation from the marines.

"I smoked you out of your home. Now I know where I stand," retorted Butler as he slammed the door thus ending his sensational and stormy career as safety director of Philadelphia.

"I don't want you in my cabinet as a resigned officer," the mayor told Butler. "You put me in a hole and I have made other arrangements."

Butler Is Silent.

Butler's face became livid. He clenched his fists, turned on his heels and stormed out of the office.

Upon reaching his office, Butler refused to discuss the matter.

When he became calm Butler stated that he could recall his resignation and would probably do so.

Coolidge Decides To Accept World League Invitation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—President Coolidge has decided to accept the league of nations' invitation to participate in its disarmament conference, it was plainly indicated at the White House today, following the cabinet meeting.

The league's invitation is being considered from a constructive standpoint, the president told callers, and with a view to ascertaining how the United States can best co-operate with the purpose of the league in obtaining world-wide reduction of armament.

Simultaneously with this clarification of the White House attitude, there was introduced in both houses of congress at noon resolutions endorsing the proposed gathering, and authorizing Mr. Coolidge appoint the necessary American delegates.

Democrats sponsored the authorization in both senate and house.

TWO SOLONS WILL DEMAND CAPS FOR FIREMEN IF POLICE GET VISORS

Sauce for Goose Is Sauce for Gander, Is Attitude of Councilmen Kerr and Farrall on Controversy.

Should the ordinance authorizing purchase of caps for members of the police force be placed on third reading at the tomorrow evening's session of the city solons, another measure, authorizing the safety director to purchase caps for members of the fire department, will be introduced by Solons N. P. Kerr and Thomas Farrall.

Councilmen Kerr and Farrall have opposed the use of city funds to purchase caps for patrolmen, contending that headwear is part of the policeman's uniform. A state examiner recently ruled that the law does not permit the city to purchase uniforms for policemen.

Members of the police force declare that their caps always have been purchased by the city, but heretofore legislation authorizing the expenditure was never necessary. The state examiner recently announced that council must approve legislation to purchase equipment for the police.

The ordinance was placed on first and second reading by a vote of five to two, Solons Chambers, Larcombe, Rowe, Eardley and Hayes approving it, while Kerr and Farrall opposed it.

"If the city is going to buy caps for the policemen, it is no more than fair that they should be purchased for members of the fire department," said Councilman Kerr today. The ordinance has been drafted by Solicitor Brokaw and will be introduced Wednesday evening if the other ordinance is passed on third and final reading.

LA FOLLETTE WILL MAKE BOW AS INSURGENT BY OPPOSING WOODLOCK

Young Bob Will Carry "Declaration of Independence" Into Effect Against New Yorker.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Young Bob LaFollette will make his senatorial debut as an insurgent by opposing the appointment of Thomas F. Woodlock, of New York, to the interstate commerce commission, it was learned today.

Upon Woodlock's appointment, young LaFollette will carry into effect the "declaration of independence" which he delivered to the Republican leaders of the senate a week ago when admitted to party membership.

Although the nomination of Woodlock will not be considered until after the Christmas vacation, administration leaders already are concerned over its fate because of the charge that President Coolidge entered "a deal" with Democrats by sending the appointment to the senate along with the nomination of Richard V. Taylor, of Alabama. The naming of the southerner, it was said; was done to alleviate Democratic opposition to Woodlock, confirmation of whose appointment a year ago was blocked by Democratic members of the senate interstate commerce committee. The charge was flatly denied by administration senators and Senator Underwood, D., of Alabama, who recommended Taylor, but is aroused considerable Democratic opposition toward the Woodlock nomination.

In announcing his opposition to the New Yorker, young LaFollette revealed that he was following directly in his father's footsteps on this particular issue. The elder LaFollette, as a member of the senate interstate commerce committee, helped to block Woodlock's confirmation last March.

THIRTY.

"I don't think you ever will have much success keeping a rein on Marion Harwood," Wyman observed, laying down his coat and rubbing his hands as if they were cold.

Laurel, tense, despairing turned away and went to the window to peer out into the darkness. When WOULD Mrs. Daly come? It seemed like hours since she had called her.

Wyman walked slowly across the hall and peered into the library. At the threshold he turned and glanced back at Laurel. For a moment he paused, then he returned to her side. "Laurel, II hope we can always oe friends."

She peered again into the darkness, then faced him. "Yes, FRIENDS, Wyman."

For a moment they stood eye to eye, current passing between them, then Laurel turned back to the window. Now she could see a car flashing its lights up the drive. In a moment the Dalys were at the door. Brent Daly, fat, puffing, followed his wife into the house wearily, and nooded weakly to Laurel. Mrs. Daly noted Wyman Holt's figure retreating into the library.

"Where is Marion?"

"Shall I have Louis call her?"

"No." Mrs. Daly threw back her wrap and handed it to her husband, her brows arching at the sounds that were emanating from the ballroom and the library. Majestically she walked into the former. Her husband, after looking around with a helpless air for a place to deposit the wrap, let it fall upon a chair and followed by Laurel's side. "Girls will be girls," he remarked, with the suggestion of a beam.

"Yes—yes!" A second later she couldn't have told whether she had said yes or no.

If the late arrival of Mrs. Brent Daly, imposing dowager, occasioned any surprise among the mary-making guests, they did not indicate it. The dance went on, and the noise continued. She stood staring at the rowdy spectacle, her color rising higher very fraction of a second. One glance at his wife caused Brent Daly to leave Laurel's side and wander, carelessly, back into the hall.

Her lips tightly compressed, Mrs. Daly marched into the library, the gryating couples making way for her as she went. The ballroom became quieter. Noble Harwood's sister found her niece perched on a library-table, an expensive tapestry, stained with wine, scruffled under her feet singing,

Hadda little he dog,
Hadda little she dog,

This was as far as she got with the ditty.

"Hello, Aunty!"

A hush settled around the table.

Mrs. Daly collected herself. "I have something to say to you, Marion." She moved away from the table. Marion, her countenance suddenly sobering, got down obediently and followed. Laurel, very self-conscious in the presence of these young people who somehow sensed that she was responsible for this scene, walked to the kitchen, as if she had a mission.

Noble's sister chose the upstairs as a place to "say something" to her niece. Marion stood regarding her solemnly, subdued.

"I thing it is time for your guests to go. . . and your father shall hear of this."

"Aw, aunty."

"Aw, Aw! Is that all you can say? AW!" the effort exhausted Mrs. Daly.

"Oh, I know what's the matter," Marion pouted. "It's Laurel. She telephoned you, I know. And I'll just tell you this, I'm not going to stand for her intereference. You'd thing she owned this house. I'm just a nobody here, that's all, a nobody." Tears of rage were appearing on her cheeks.

Mrs. Daly was nonplussed. Her niece had tapped a vulnerable point—Laurel.

"SHE didn't have anything to do with the planning of this, did she?" she asked suddenly.

"She said it would be all right. I asked her to be the chaperon. But instead of staying here, she went out and didn't return until just a little while ago." The pencilling upon her eyebrows, dampened by the tears, was messing up her eyes and making her a sorry looking person indeed.

"Well, I shall see that Noble Harwood knows all about this, Mrs. Daly announced firmly. "Go to your room and go to bed—you're not respectable looking. I'll send your guests home."

"Don't aunty, I ——."

"Oh, I won't embarrass you, you young ——." The expression was not completed. Noble Harwood's sister turned back down the stairs, and rang for Louis. Laurel appeared from out of the back of the hall.

"I think you might have put a stop to this if you had tried. I must say you made a pretty job of chaperoning!"

"But, Mrs. Daly——." Laurel stifled the protest. Her color rose. It was folly to argue with her sister-in-law at this time and place, with the young people within hearing distance.

Louis presented himself. "Bring the wraps of the guests." She looked around for her husband, and not finding him holding her cape, picked it up wrathfully from the spot where he had let it fall. Until he came to her, she stood at the foot of the stairway, patting her foot, and indicating no recognition of the young people who passed her on their way out.

Laurel walked wearily up the stairs. What a mess. Something made her feel she was to blame. But how could she have prevented it? And what would Noble say?

India Reds Hold Aloof From Other Extremists; Warned by Britain

CAWNPORE — The British government's campaign against Communists in England has led leaders of the Indian Communist party to declare that they are not in a position to "maintain relations with other similar organizations."

The secretary of the party pointed out in a formal statement that any dealings with the Communists of England would cause the government "to crush the party then and there," and also warned against communicating with the Communist party of Russia.

METHUSELAH'S WIFE

THE STORY OF A GIRL By EDGAR POE NORRIS WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY

THIRTY.

"I don't think you ever will have much success keeping a rein on Marion Harwood," Wyman observed, laying down his coat and rubbing his hands as if they were cold.

Laurel, tense, despairing turned away and went to the window to peer out into the darkness. When WOULD Mrs. Daly come? It seemed like hours since she had called her.

Wyman walked slowly across the hall and peered into the library. At the threshold he turned and glanced back at Laurel. For a moment he paused, then he returned to her side. "Laurel, Il hope we can always oe friends."

She peered again into the darkness, then faced him. "Yes, FRIENDS, Wyman."

For a moment they stood eye to eye, current passing between them, then Laurel turned back to the window. Now she could see a car flashing its lights up the drive. In a moment the Dalys were at the door. Brent Daly, fat, puffing, followed his wife into the house wearily, and nooded weakly to Laurel. Mrs. Daly noted Wyman Holt's figure retreating into the library.

"Where is Marion?"

"Shall I have Louis call her?"

"No." Mrs. Daly threw back her wrap and handed it to her husband, her brows arching at the sounds that were emanating from the ballroom and the library. Majestically she walked into the former. Her husband, after looking around with a helpless air for a place to deposit the wrap, let it fall upon a chair and followed by Laurel's side. "Girls will be girls," he remarked, with the suggestion of a beam.

"Yes—yes!" A second later she couldn't have told whether she had said yes or no.

If the late arrival of Mrs. Brent Daly, imposing dowager, occasioned any surprise among the mary-making guests, they did not indicate it. The dance went on, and the noise continued. She stood staring at the rowdy spectacle, her color rising higher very fraction of a second. One glance at his wife caused Brent Daly to leave Laurel's side and wander, carelessly, back into the hall.

Her lips tightly compressed, Mrs. Daly marched into the library, the gryating couples making way for her as she went. The ballroom became quieter. Noble Harwood's sister found her niece perched on a library-table, an expensive tapestry, stained with wine, scruffled under her feet singing,

Hadda little he dog,
Hadda little she dog,

This was as far as she got with the ditty.

"Hello, Aunty!"

A hush settled around the table.

Mrs. Daly collected herself. "I have something to say to you, Marion." She moved away from the table. Marion, her countenance suddenly sobering, got down obediently and followed. Laurel, very self-conscious in the presence of these young people who somehow sensed that she was responsible for this scene, walked to the kitchen, as if she had a mission.

Noble's sister chose the upstairs as a place to "say something" to her niece. Marion stood regarding her solemnly, subdued.

"I thing it is time for your guests to go. . . and your father shall hear of this."

"Aw, aunty."

"Aw, Aw! Is that all you can say? AW!" the effort exhausted Mrs. Daly.

"Oh, I know what's the matter," Marion pouted. "It's Laurel. She telephoned you, I know. And I'll just tell you this, I'm not going to stand for her intereference. You'd thing she owned this house. I'm just a nobody here, that's all, a nobody." Tears of rage were appearing on her cheeks.

Mrs. Daly was nonplussed. Her niece had tapped a vulnerable point—Laurel.

"SHE didn't have anything to do with the planning of this, did she?" she asked suddenly.

"She said it would be all right. I asked her to be the chaperon. But instead of staying here, she went out and didn't return until just a little while ago." The pencilling upon her eyebrows, dampened by the tears, was messing up her eyes and making her a sorry looking person indeed.

"Well, I shall see that Noble Harwood knows all about this, Mrs. Daly announced firmly. "Go to your room and go to bed—you're not respectable looking. I'll send your guests home."

"Don't aunty. I ———."

"Oh, I won't embarrass you, you young ———." The expression was not completed. Noble Harwood's sister turned back down the stairs, and rang for Louis. Laurel appeared from out of the back of the hall.

"I think you might have put a stop to this if you had tried. I must say you made a pretty job of chaperoning!"

"But, Mrs. Daly——." Laurel stifled the protest. Her color rose. It was folly to argue with her sister-in-law at this time and place, with the young people within hearing distance.

Louis presented himself. "Bring the wraps of the guests." She looked around for her husband, and not finding him holding her cape, picked it up wrathfully from the spot where he had let it fall. Until he came to her, she stood at the foot of the stairway, patting her foot, and indicating no recognition of the young people who passed her on their way out.

Laurel walked wearily up the stairs. What a mess. Something made her feel she was to blame. But how could she have prevented it? And what would Noble say?

TYPICAL BOOB ENDS GAMING IN CLEVELAND

Lancaster, Pa., Traction Official is Held as Thief.

HE LOST $40,000

His Confession Closes Places in City's Suburbs.

CLEVELAND—Faced by a growing tide of popular disapproval the "palaces of chance," located in the more obscure suburbs surrounding the city, are closed today. The action, following the confession of H. H. Hersey, Lancaster, Pa., traction official, that he lost $28,000 at dice, blackjack and other gaming, then topped it off with a loss of $11,000 Thanksgiving night in a stud poker game in which the limit was $200.

No more—at least until the present excitement, which threatens to result in the removal of one or more officials—will the game-keeper's drone as he deals the elusive cards making up the number 21 to the fish-faced gamblers be heard enticing them to increase their wagers, while the "payoff" man, his roll constantly increasing with the play as it goes on, adjures the players to "get it down."

No Dues in Clubs.

Cleveland had three gambling institutions of more than usual pretentiousness doing business just outside its borders. Operated as "clubs" their real nature was but thinly concealed, anyone, regardless of color or social distinction, being eligible for membership, and there being no "dues" except the sums wagered and lost.

Regular taxi lines operated from a downtown headquarters and hauled members free of charge to these "clubs." Large sums were staked and that the gamblers were usually unsuccessful in beating the house is pretty well evidenced in recent suits filed in common pleas court to recover money lost in gambling. George Himmelstein, alleged proprietor of the Grand Fraternity club, is now defending actions brought to recover $58,000, said to have been lost within a week.

Himmelstein, according to police reports, has gone from poverty to the near-millionaire class within a few years' time, although once or twice his rise to fortune met setbacks, when "longshots" heavily backed, went over, or when the favorites won too regularly at shorter odds.

Typical "Boob."

Hersey, according to habitues of the Clinton club, where he dropped $28,000 of the $40,000 he admitted taking from his company, was a typical "boob" at the gambling game.

"That guy didn't know anything about gambling," one who watched his roll melt rapidly at "blackjack" and dice said. "He was the easiest mark that ever came inside the doors, and it wasn't any wonder he lost the money so fast.

"Why, Hersey would bet that black was white if they gave him long enough odds," he continued. "He seemed to like to lose money."

Hersey, facing a probable long prison term as a result of his sudden yielding to temptation when he went to a bank and drew $40,000 then drove to Harrisburg and boarded a train for Cleveland, was of great assistance to police, after he broke down and confessed his whole story.

When arrested, all he had left of his loot was a solitary nickel and the rubber bands which had been around the money when he drew it from the bank.

Household labor is so cheap and electric current so dear in Denmark that flatirons and vacuum cleaners are the only electric labor saving devices used in homes there.

Dead Comrade's Ashes Carried in Shell by Racing Crew in Japan

TOKYO.—"The my ashes with you and do your best to win the race."

This was the injunction placed upon the crew of the Otaru Middle school by one of their comrades who died a few days before the oarsmen were to leave for Tokyo to compete in athletic contests at Meiji Shrine. In compliance with the dying wish of their late crewmate, the Otaru oarsmen carried a small urn containing his ashes in their shell as they entered the race.

Although the Otaru crew gave their best throughout the contest it was not enough. Honsho Middle school swept across the finish line a few inches ahead of them. After the race the Otaru oarsmen placed the urn containing the ashes of their former comrade before a shrine in their training quarters and offered apologies to his spirit for failing to win.

Disarmament Plans

About 50 countries have invited the United States to join with them in a general study of the armament question, with a view to meeting later, probably some time next year, for some more practical armament limitation.

The present effort is to agree on such fundamental things as what makes war power, what are the various kinds of war power, how much of such power the nations have now, and how little they can get along with. When those facts are assembled and accepted, it may be possible to go ahead and get somewhere with arms reduction by land, air and water, thus saving a lot of money, lessening competition, subduing international fears and making wars less likely.

Before the World war, the United States would have joined in any such undertaking as a matter of course. During the war such action was looked forward to as a peace program worth fighting for. Since the war America has taken the leadership in this very thing. Progressive disarmament by international agreement is an American policy, and a non-partisan policy.

It happens that the 50 nations now inviting America to cooperate in such a policy belong to the league of nations and extend the invitation through that body. It is hardly conceivable that, merely because America sees fit to remain outside of the league, it should refuse to co-operate with the league in such a great and typically American reform.

A Pleasant Resolution

Close on the trail of Christmas festivities comes the New Year. Somebody with an efficiency complex, or perhaps only with good sense, suggests that now is as good a time as any to plan one's New Year's resolutions. He suggests, too, that the real success of this annual resolving business, like success in other lines, depends on starting on a small scale and gradually working up to something bigger. Two resolutions are offered for consideration.

1. Do not spend more than your income.

2. Devote a few minutes each day to learning something useful.

They are pretty good, as resolutions go, but it might be objected that they are too much alike in spirit. Why not change the second a little?

2. Devote a few minutes each day to enjoying something lovely?

There are quite a number of things that qualify, both indoors and out, inexpensive and ready at hand. There are books and music and pictures within and there is still all of nature without. Sunsets occur early enough these days to be enjoyed by many people on their way home from work. Stars were never finer. Children playing out of doors nearly always reward appreciative scrutiny. The list of possibilities is too long to enumerate, but a devotee of this habit will find it infinitely varied and suited to every taste.

American Aristocracy

Vincent Astor, New York aristocrat and multimillionaire, interviewed for Collier's, insists that there isn't any aristocracy of the sort commonly imagined. That, he says, is an idea spread by the movies, which give "Hollywood interpretations of the luxurious laziness of the so-called Four Hundred."

"True," he says, "rich people sometimes display their wealth in a vulgar way. But the society people I am privileged to know—I so call them because that is the popular tag—are folks with usual American tastes and usual American jobs.

"They may have more money than the average American, but they don't eat any more meals or wear any more clothes, and they can't sleep in any more beds. If there is any social gulf between different groups of Americans, it isn't so much measured by money as by headlines."

Very likely the headlines do give an artificial notion sometimes of the distance separating "high society" from other kinds of society, just as people generally exaggerate the importance of "social recognition."

If there is a real aristocracy in this country—and if there isn't, there ought to be—it is a kindly, tolerant aristocracy of taste and manners, which isn't necessarily associated with wealth.

The Patient's Courage

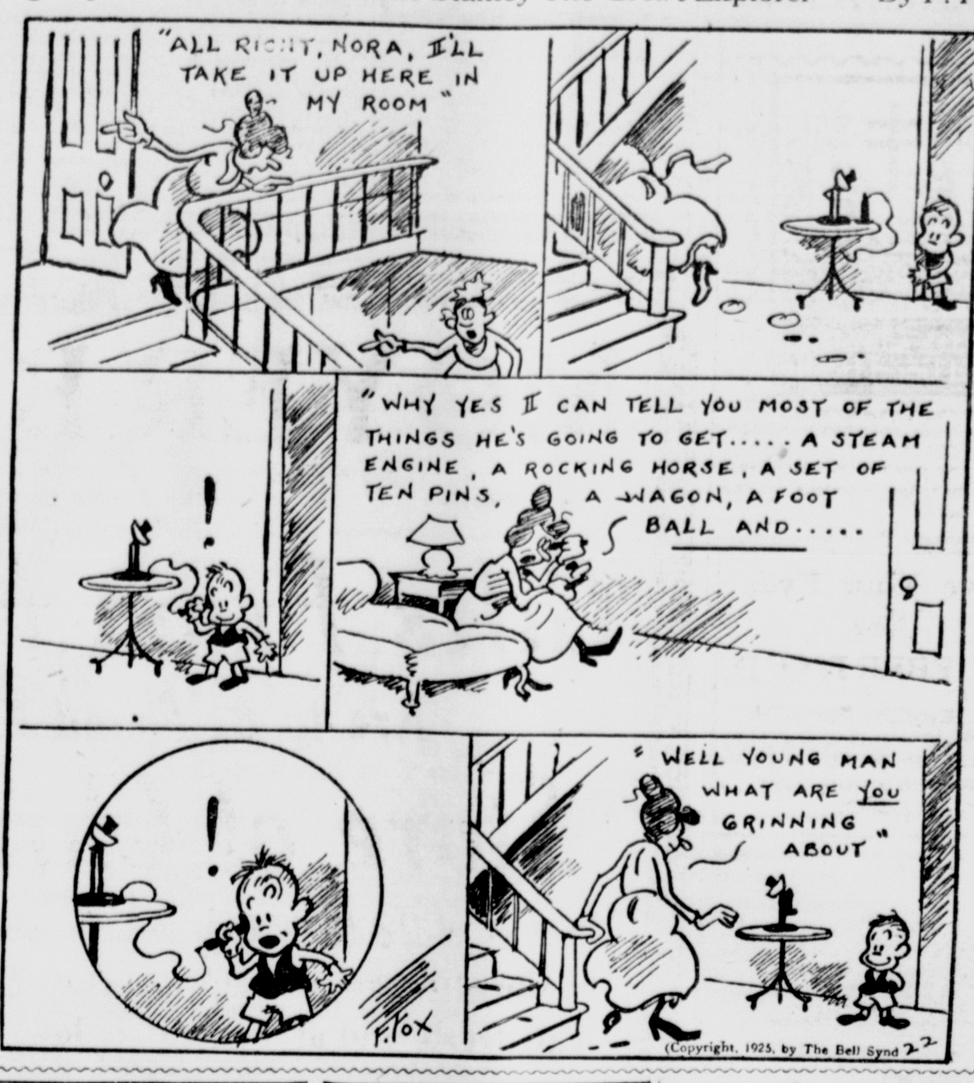

"Courageous persons are the easiest to cure of goiter troubles, whether the rest cure, X-radiation or surgical treatment is used." This is the testimony of George W. Crile, one of the best known American surgeons. "The defeatist patient," he adds, "is likely to make definite and permanent improvement."

The observation doubtless applies to a wide range of other diseases as well. In large degree, no doubt, it applies to all, even those which do not depend so directly on nervous condition and mental attitude.

Courage has been called "the fundamental virtue." It may also be the fundamental rule of health. Any physician will testify that a big factor in any illness is the will to recover. The patient who is determined to get well, and believes he can, has the victory half won already.

Courage alone will not necessarily work a cure. But supplemented by common sense and obedience to the doctor's instructions, it multiplies the patient's chances for quick recovery from moderate illness and for ultimate recovery if there is a fighting chance.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — A New Yorker intent upon making a brighter world for his fellows recently started a Tip-a-Dime league. No tip by members was to exceed that amount and the plan died aborning. He could not find a single person who would take oath of allegiance.

A dime tip 10 years ago was considered sufficient for the casual service of the hat checker. Today a quarter is the minimum, and brigands of the coat rooms put decoy half dollars in their plates and are successful, especially in the night clubs, in luring many tips that size.

Indeed a young lady at Montmartre several years ago was presented with a hundred dollar bill for taking care of a silk hat for three hours. So far as can be learned the donor's knee jerks were normal. He was in the after-glow of "a big killing in the street."

Tipping has been bloated to proportions of a huge gouge beyond the average purse. In a few instances it has even spread to the front office of large hotels. It was a personal experience of mine to receive intimation from a clerk at one on Forty-second street that for $10 a reservation could be secured for a relative.

As matters stood there were no vacancies. No secrecy was involved. The gaily habited young man presented his card as the one to whom the fee might be sent. A luncheon tip for two is rarely under a dollar, and the dinner tip $2 in the best places. The size of the check is not considered.

It is no secret that head porters at some of the largest hotels work without salary and depend upon tips. The income in some instances exceeds that of the general manager. It is said two are making more than $25,000 a year. Several are rich in the New York term.

It has been my experience that the most appreciative of all public servants who receive tips are the "red caps" at the great railroad terminal stations. They have a thank you and a smile. The most discourteous are those who drive roving taxis.

There are a number of head waiters who politely refuse tips in public. They have their own clientele who mail generous checks—usually around Xmas time—and this saves them the humiliation of being tipped before others.

A traveler has made it a custom to send a souvenir to his wife from various places he visits. In a New York hotel the other morning he happened to pass several rooms thrown open for display of what appeared to be women's clothes. The traveler said cheerfully to the man who appeared to be in charge "Have you a pretty dress for a pretty girl?" The salesman resitated. "There are burial clothes," he said.

O, yes, I forgot about the headwaiter who was given an automobile by a diner for rendering a neat service. The dined was supposed to be in Philadelphia when his wife came in with a party of friends. The headwaiter held them at the entrance while an assistant gave warning and scurried the diner and his companion from an unfinished meal out a side entrance.

Then there is the story of a straying husband in a supper club that provided only one exit. He was shown to a window fire escape when his wife came in and here he perched for three hours in a drizzling rain. Another good fellow—all wet.

A beauty parlor on Madison has a card in its entrance reading: "By appointment only. New clients must furnish satisfactory reference." I assume one must furnish proof a mole is genuine.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Bridging the English Channel.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—American engineers are deeply interested in a plan to bridge the English Channel that is now under consideration by commercial organizations in London and Paris. On this side of the Atlantis it has been contended for years that if American enterprise and engineering talent had a chance at it the problem of transportation from England to the Continent would be solved speedily, the solution generally advocated being a tunnel.

Now what is heralded as possily a more feasible solution has been brought forth by a Swiss enginer, Jules Jaeger. This visionary would link up England and the Continent with a gigantic construction that would be in effect a combination of bridge, viaduct and canal. It is claimed that there are fewer engineering problems involved in this above-water conquering of the Channel than there are in the tunnel project, that it would be far more efficient, and that the cost would be comparatively little greater.

For more than half a century the tunnel idea has been under consideration ,and engineers have proved, to their own satisfaction at least, that it was entirely practicable. The latest estimate of its cost approximated $300,000,000.

M. Jaeger, who sponsors what is known as the bridge plan, says that his scheme can be carried through at a cost of not to exceed $400,000,000.

This plan contemplates the construction of two parallel jetties from Calais, in France, to Deal, in England, a distance of some 26 miles. The jetties would be broken by high cantilever bridges at either end to permit water traffic up and down the channel. Each jetty would be wide enough to carry a double track railroad with a superimposed roadway for motor and other vehicular traffic. The space between the jetties, one thousand feet of sheltered and protected waterway, would be in effect a great canal extending from the Calais Canal to England. The depth of this canal would range from 120 to 180 feet.

Extended To London.

Eventually, it is said, the canal would be extended from Deal across the northeast corner of Kent to Hefne Bay, in an estuary of the Thames river, thus making London in reality the terminus of the Continental rail, road and waterway systems. Railroad and motor traffic would be carried in a westerly direction from Deal to connect with the present rail and highway systems leading into London.

Great harbors would be constructed off both Calais and Deal, with adequate facilities for the transportation of cargo from rail and barge to steamer. The trains and other road traffic would be carried over these harbors on the immense bridges heretofore mentioned, which would be similar to some of the big East river bridges at New York. These bridges would be protected by giant breakwaters that would safeguard the traffic through the canal.

The shortest route across the Channel would have Dover as the English terminus, but M. Jaeger has selected the longer route to Deal for two reasons. First, he says that he will thus avoid the traffic congestion at Dover, and second, he will avoid the terrific currents off Dover which would add immeasurably to the construction difficulties and expense of the project.

Should the enterprise be carried through it will be possible for trains and motor vehicles to run direct from England to France and thence throughout the Continent, for canal barges to be loaded at the docks of London and then towed through a sheltered waterway into the Continental canal system, and to revive the channel carferry traffic that attained enormous proportions during the war through the operation of the military car ferries between Richborough, just north of Deal, to France. In the Jaeger car ferry service there would be virtually none of the hazards and interruption from bad weather such as the war-time service in open water experienced, for the ferries would be sheltered by the jetties and breakwaters all the way across the channel.

The Military To Decide.

Military authorities in England will probably decide whether the Jaeger project is to be undertaken, for it is well known that the British war office has long prevented the construction of a tunnel under the channel. The French are said to have favored the tunnel idea and to have been ready at any time to cooperate in carrying it through, but the British military leaders have heretofore maintained a united front in opposition.

The reason for this has not been the fear that in time of war the tunnel could not be adequately guarded, or obstructed, or in part destroyed to preclude its use by the enemy. It is recognized that it would be comparatively easy for England to make certain that either she and her allies would have sole use of the tunnel, or that none could use it.

However, the real bugaboo in the British military mind is in connection with possible post-war complications. Suppose England should be defeated in a war in the course of which she had controlled or put out of commission a tunnel under the channel or a bridge over it. Terms of peace might be forced upon her that would provide for the restoration of the tunnel or bridge and its operation for all future time under international or even foreign control.

That is the thing that is unthinkable to the English. Their insular tradition means much to them, but they place even more than a sentimental value upon the few miles of tempestuous sea that separate their tight little island from the continent. They have always believed that they could control traffic by boat across the channel, or were willing to take their chances of being able to do so. But to construct a safe and easy way across, whether by bridge or by tunnel, and then have that control of that way taken definitely and permanently out of their hands—that is a possibility that is not contemplated with equanimity in Downing Street.

Singugarly enough, perhaps, the airplane may have an important bearing on the decision to undertake either the tunnel or the more recent channel bridge project. With air transportation developed to where it is now, and with the almost limitless prospects of its future development, the English Channel is no longer so much of a barrier, for ships of the air have all the room imaginable, up, down, and sideways, in which to hop across, and the crossing becomes a matter of minutes rather than hours.

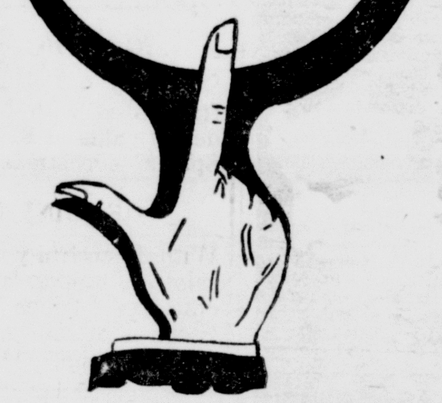

In the circumstances, even the British military mind may conclude that if a trans-channel bridge or tunnel would be commercially advantageous there is no longer any sound reason why it should not be constructed.

Advocates of the bridge scheme, by the way, point out that it would it would have been a tremendous military asset to England and her allies to have had such a dam across the channel during the late war. It would have been a barrier to the operation of German submarines such as it was never possible to establish by means of mines and controls.

Part of the popularity of French dress ing lies in the fact that there is little of it.—Fortoria Times.

The trains and other road traffic would be carried over these harbors on the immense bridges heretofore mentioned, which would be similar to some of the big East river bridges at New York. These bridges would be protected by giant breakwaters that would safeguard the traffic through the canal.

The shortest route across the Channel would have Dover as the English terminus, but M. Jaeger has selected the longer route to Deal for two reasons. First, he says that he will thus avoid the traffic congestion at Dover, and second, he will avoid the terrific currents off Dover which would add immeasurably to the construction difficulties and expense of the project.

Should the enterprise be carried through it will be possible for trains and motor vehicles to run direct from England to France and thence throughout the Continent, for canal barges to be loaded at the docks of London and then towed through a sheltered waterway into the Continental canal system, and to revive the channel carferry traffic that attained enormous proportions during the war through the operation of the military car ferries between Richborough, just north of Deal, to France. In the Jaeger car ferry service there would be virtually none of the hazards and interruption from bad weather such as the war-time service in open water experienced, for the ferries would be sheltered by the jetties and breakwaters all the way across the channel.

The Military To Decide.

Military authorities in England will probably decide whether the Jaeger project is to be undertaken, for it is well known that the British war office has long prevented the construction of a tunnel under the channel. The French are said to have favored the tunnel idea and to have been ready at any time to cooperate in carrying it through, but the British military leaders have heretofore maintained a united front in opposition.

The reason for this has not been the fear that in time of war the tunnel could not be adequately guarded, or obstructed, or in part destroyed to preclude its use by the enemy. It is recognized that it would be comparatively easy for England to make certain that either she and her allies would have sole use of the tunnel, or that none could use it.

However, the real bugaboo in the British military mind is in connection with possible post-war complications. Suppose England should be defeated in a war in the course of which she had controlled or put out of commission a tunnel under the channel or a bridge over it. Terms of peace might be forced upon her that would provide for the restoration of the tunnel or bridge and its operation for all future time under international or even foreign control.

That is the thing that is unthinkable to the English. Their insular tradition means much to them, but they place even more than a sentimental valne upon the few miles of tempestuous sea that separate their tight little island from the continent. They have always believed that they could control traffic by boat across the channel, or were willing to take their chances of being able to do so. But to construct a safe and easy way across, whether by bridge or by tunnel, and then have that control of that way taken definitely and permanently out of their hands—that is a possibility that is not contemplated with equanimity in Downing Street.

Singugarly enough, perhaps, the airplane may have an important bearing on the decision to undertake either the tunnel or the more recent channel bridge project. With air transportation developed to where it is now, and with the almost limitless prospects of its future development, the English Channel is no longer so much of a barrier, for ships of the air have all the room imaginable, up, down, and sideways, in which to hop across, and the crossing becomes a matter of minutes rather than hours.

In the circumstances, even the British military mind may conclude that if a trans-channel bridge or tunnel would be commercially advantageous there is no longer any sound reason why it should not be constructed.

Advocates of the bridge scheme, by the way, point out that it would it would have been a tremendous military asset to England and her allies to have had such a dam across the channel during the late war. It would have been a barrier to the operation of German submarines such as it was never possible to establish by means of mines and controls.

Substitute for Sleep Offered by German; Men are Excluded

CHICAGO—Sleep no longer is a necessity! Try the soothing rays of the "Mountain Sun" machine, and refrain from it.—"Men excluded."

This latest device for aiding women to beauty was shown at the first annual convention of the American Association Culture school held here.

Dr. Carl Loeb, the beauty expert from Germany, who invented the machine and gave a demonstration of its possibilities, says that a half-hour spent basking in the artificial rays, will produce the same effect as eight hours of sleep.

"Wrinkles, skin diseases, rickets and anemia," said Dr. Loeb, "are some of the ailments that can be cured by the machine, whose rays are unlike those of any other device. These rays, that I perfected four years ago after years of research and study, are almost exact replicas of the sun.

"And sleep has a substitute now. Those long hours spent in bed are a waste of time. Just one short half hour of treatment, and the patient has the equivalent of eight hours of sleep.

Problem of Providing Home for Armenian Refugees Big Task

GENEVA.—The vexed problem of finding a new home for the 250,000 Armenian refugees who are still homeless in the Near East has been referred by the league of nations to a new international committee headed by Dame Rachel Crowdy, an Englishwoman, who has achieved a considerable international reputation as head of the league's social section.

The whole question is thus taken out of the hands of Dr. Nansen and the Near East Relief, who recently collaborated in a comprehensive survey of the situation and recommended an international loan to provide transportation back to Russia for a large part of the refugees.

Miss Crowdy and her associates of the new committee will visit Russian Armenia early in the spring, with a group of Americans, to study the Nansen recommendations.

Plans for deepening famed Lake Geneva to make the Rhone navigable as far as the Swiss frontier have been made.

"Satan in Sables" with

is the story of a reckless Russian prince who walked the primrose path, to the merry tune of aching hearts.

But one day a dancing bit of a girl flits across his pathway—and the bright lights lose their glamour.

How she lured him—baffled him—seemed always just beyond his reach—and then—came back into his life like a ray of sunshine

SOCIETY

Dress Rehearsal for "That's That" On Christmas Day

Dress rehearsal for the musical comedy, "That's That," to be staged in the high school auditorium next Monday and Tuesday evenings under the auspices of Harding chapter, Order of De Molay, will be held on the school stage at 3 o'clock Christmas afternoon.

Ticket sale and the campaign in general was discussed at a meeting of the De Molay members, held in the grill room of the Masonic temple, last evening.

The choruses, which have been rehearsing separately, are working with the principals this week. The song and dance work of the leading characters is a strong feature in "That's That." All the music was written especially for the show.

John Rumberger plays the leading male role of Kenneth Jones, son of a millionaire, who is carrying on a delightful romance under concealed identity at an exclusive Palm Beach hotel. "Maybe Lady Luck Will Smile on Me." "What's Become of the Chaperon" and "The Dream That I Dreamed About You," featuring Verne Lucas Wright, leading lady, are three of the musical hits.

In the fun-making role, Kenneth Berg, with his original capers, will keep the audience in an uproar of laughter every minute he is on the stage. He is cast as Eddie Dewey from the "sticks," dealing in Florida real estate. Miss Mary Alice McGonigal and Glen Roberts will be Mamie Rimer and Mickey Sullivan from New York. The three comedy characters are brought together in a side-splitting song and dance number, "That's That." A dance number, "The Bowery," by Mamie and Mickey, is another big asset to the mirth section of the show.

Miss Hadfield Hostess.

Miss Emily Hadfield entertained the members of the Thursday Evening Bridge club recently at her home in Bradshaw avenue. Three tables of bridge were in play during the social hours, trophies being awarded Miss Agnes O'Hanlon and Miss Marguerite McCoy. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Edward Hadfield.

Special guests were Mrs. Charles Horton and Misses Ruth Flower, Verne McCoy and Stella Sattis.

The next meeting will be held Thursday evening, January 7, at the home of Miss Margaret Duffy, of Pine street.

Hi and Ex-Hi Dance.

The Hi and Ex-Hi dance for the Christmas holidays, honoring students who have returned home to spend the Yuletide vacation, will be held tonight in the Odd Fellows temple, West Sixth street. The ballroom will be decorated in keeping with the season, miniature Christmas trees being used in the effects. Dancing will continue from 8:30 until 12 o'clock, with the Sturdemar orchestra in charge of the program.

Sons of St. George To Entertain.

The Sons of St. George will give a Christmas social Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in their hall in Lincoln avenue. A splendid musical program has been arranged. The Cornish brass band of New York will play selections and the Sons of St. George Glee club will give Christmas carols. Refreshments will be served.

D. of A. Christmas Party.

Following the initiation of a class of candidates last evening, Pride of Valley Council No. 4, Daughters of America, entertained with a Christmas party in the K. of P. hall, Altman building. Guests exchanged gifts. Covers were arranged for 50 at the luncheon, which was served by the social committee, with Mrs. Mary Smith as chairman.

Next Monday evening a euchre party will be held in the K. of P. hall, which will be the last session in this hall as the council has leased the Veterans of Foreign Wars' hall, Fifth street, as their meeting place. The euchre party will be in charge of Mrs. Leslie Tatgenhorst and Mrs. Mary Smith.

Dress Rehearsal for "That's That" On Christmas Day

Dress rehearsal for the musical comedy, "That's That," to be staged in the high school auditorium next Monday and Tuesday evenings under the auspices of Harding chapter, Order of De Molay, will be held on the school stage at 3 o'clock Christmas afternoon.

Ticket sale and the campaign in general was discussed at a meeting of the De Molay members, held in the grill room of the Masonic temple, last evening.

The choruses, which have been rehearsing separately, are working with the principals this week. The song and dance work of the leading characters is a strong feature in "That's That." All the music was written especially for the show.

John Rumberger plays the leading male role of Kenneth Jones, son of a millionaire, who is carrying on a delightful romance under concealed identity at an exclusive Palm Beach hotel. "Maybe Lady Luck Will Smile on Me." "What's Become of the Chaperon" and "The Dream That I Dreamed About You," featuring Verne Lucas Wright, leading lady, are three of the musical hits.

In the fun-making role, Kenneth Berg, with his original capers, will keep the audience in an uproar of laughter every minute he is on the stage. He is cast as Eddie Dewey from the "sticks," dealing in Florida real estate. Miss Mary Alice McGonigal and Glen Roberts will be Mamie Rimer and Mickey Sullivan from New York. The three comedy characters are brought together in a side-splitting song and dance number, "That's That." A dance number, "The Bowery," by Mamie and Mickey, is another big asset to the mirth section of the show.

Syd Chaplin Hits Bouncing Pace in 'Man on the Box"

During the filming of "The Man on the Box," the Warner Bros. classic of the screen, starring Syd Chaplin, which is now playing at the American theatre, there was a parade flitting to and from the set that would send any gambler dashing over to his broker's to place a large order for stock in any good bed-spring company.

Syd's first picture for Warners is said to be the funniest thing he has ever done, surpassing all his previous successes; and the prop men of his company, who are accustomed to helping on dramatic pictures, got their first lesson in what it means to make comedies. They all wore worried and abused expressions as they toted bed springs in and out of the set, for Syd broke five of them in half an hour. However, when the scene was completed, one boy passed the word to another that this bird Chaplin will never be accused of holding out on realistic stuff.

"The Man on the Box," based on the celebrated Harold MacGrath novel and play, concerns the romantc adventures of charming and wealthy Bob Warburton, and also gives Syd an opportunity to masquerade as a firtatious maid. Those who saw him in "Charley's Aunt," are assured by reviewers in other cities that he is even funnier in his latest production.

As we understand it, the Charleston is merely free verse done with the heels instead of with metrical feet.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Collections for Christmas and Winter Fund Total $2,442.11.

Officers of the Salvation army today began to pack Christmas dinner baskets, which will be distributed to needy families of the East Liverpool-Wellsville-Chester-Newell district, Thursday.

Each basket will cost approximately $5, according to Field Major Joseph Hughes. The baskets will vary in size, depending upon the number in each family. Each will contain a large sized chicken, one-half peck potatoes, bunch onions, two loaves bread, one half pound butter, one pound coffee, two pounds sugar, package rolled oats, package jello, can beans, can tomatoes, can peas, apples, celery, can milk and copy Christmas War Cry, official Salvation Army publication.

According to Salvation Army officials, sufficient food is packed in each basket to provide not only the dinner but also supper for the ordinary family. The baskets to families in East Liverpool, Newell and Chester will be given out from the Salvation Army citadel, East Third stret, at 10 a. m. Thursday, while those for Wellsville will be distributed from the Hartman store, corner Third and Main strets.

Major Hughes has planned a brief service for the recipients of the baskets at the Saivation Ary citadel just before the distribution is made. This is in conformity with a plan which has been in effect for several years.

An invitation is extended to the public to visit the Third street citadel at 10 o'clock Thursday morning or at any time during the day to see the Christmas dinner display.

Collections for the Christmas dinner and winter relief fund yesterday totaled $195.87, which brought the total up to $2,442.11. Of yesterday's contribution, $119.35 was received through the mails, $56.27 in the street kettles and $20.25 by the committee canvassing the potteries.

CALL PHONE RATE HEARING

Forty Ohio Cities Interested in State Inquiry.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Submission of a partial report by the Ohio Bell Telephone company of the inventory of its properties throughout the state marked the opening here today of the state-wide probe by the state utilities commission into the telephone rate situation.

The company values its buildings at approximately $8,000,000 and lands at about $4,000,000. Valuation of its equipment and other possessions will be submitted later during the hearing, it was announced.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Linking up of the names of Henry Ford and Hudson motor cars in market gossip led to an unusually active demand for Hudson stock in the early trading today, and the five point advance in that stock to above 107 was the feature of that period. The market as a whole moved around unsteadily, with alternate advances and declines in the principal stocks and the volume of trading of the usual holiday proportions.

Some effort was made to inject the coal strike situation and the inability of the miners and operators to arrive at a basis for the resumption of negotiations, into the stock market, and speculative selling in some stocks was credited to that factor. As a rule the stocks which opened lower on professional selling pressure were the first to rebound. The tight call money situation is generally accepted as an inevitable condition over the year-end, with the banks giving first consideration to industrial and commercial demands.

"Each parent would then be notified as to the dental attention their child needed and urged to have it taken care of at once. The plan of employing a licensed dentist who could do this work, would be preferred, however."

The committee pointed out that many children are handicapped in their school work through defective teeth, and that experiments show that a child learns quicker and their health is improved if their teeth are sound.

"We believe that this is a step forward for the health of the school child and for the schools in general," said Dr. Williamson, "and the dentists are willing to co-operate in any move which will mean better teeth for the children."

All members of the board expressed themselves as in accord with the recommendations of the committee, but explained that the finances of the schools were a stumbling block. President D. F. Later, President White named Members Ferguson, Weaver and Wilhelm and Superintendent of Schools C. S. This committee will report at an early meeting of the board.

The board granted Joseph Dickey, welfare director for the Homer Laughlin China company, use of the high school auditorium, free of charge, on Wednesday or Thursday of next week for the Christmas entertainment which employes of the Laughlin pottery will tender the 75 children of the McCullough-Jerfferson County Children's home at Yellow Creek. Dickey explained that the entertainment was to be free, a silver offering to be taken during the evening going to the children.

Purchase 150 Books.

Upon recommendation of Superintendent McVay, the board authorized the purchase of 150 copies of Edward Bok's book, "The Boy Who Followed Ben Franklin," for reading purposes for pupils in the upper elementary schools. The books will cost about $100.

A communication was read from Dr. T. T. Church, Lisbon, county health commissioner, which said that the county board had excluded from the Glenmoor school children who had not been vaccinated during the last five years. The board voted to file the communication.

School teachers will receive their Christmas pay tomorrow, which marks the closing of the schools for the holiday vacation. Christmas programs will be carried out in a majority of the schools during the afternoon session which will close at 3 o'clock.

WOMAN'S LOVE WINS FREEDOM FOR ARNSTEIN

Broker Leaves Leavenworth to Meet His Wife, Fanny Brice.

SLATE IS CLEAN

Awaits Reunion With Children Who Know Nothing of Past.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Dec. 22.—Nicky Arnstein came back today to the world from which almost two years ago the United States government shut him out.

He came back with society's slate against him wiped clean and with 72 days off for good behavior because a woman's love proved stronger than the demand that he be made to pay for other sins of which he stood accused.

Tonight in Chicago he will meet that woman—Fanny Brice of the "Follies," of the vaudeville stage, and now of the "Music Box Revue," and their children, the woman who, when she married him "for better or for worse" in 1917, meant it literally and proved it, the children who never have been told their father was in prison.

Yet, with this pleasing reunion ahead and in face of the season of forgiveness and good will, Nicky came out of prison in a truculent mood, unchastened by months on end of shoveling ashes and breathing vague threats of telling what he knows and making any number of people sweat for what he has been through.

It was in the early dawn that the gates of Leavenworth prison opened, spewed forth nine men into the long flight of steps that lead to prison, then closed with a clang.

Threatens Exposure.

Eight of the men, grotesquely attired in the misfit outfits which Uncle Sam gives those who have paid their debts behind the bars or in the out-of-date garments they wore when they entered the prison, ran capering down the steps, shouting hilariously.

That was Nicky Arnstein. Tall, slim, elegant, unhurried and immaculately dressed in the new dark overcoat, black fedora, pin-stripe grey suit and gleaming black shoes which Fanny Brice had sent him, he sauntered leisurely along behind the others.

Nicky, middle-aged, a little more grey about the temples, smiled a bit superciliously behind the stiletto-pointed black mustache he had been permitted to cultivate as his release neared.

"You can quote me as saying I'm glad to be out of that place," he said to reporters.

Then he cast a vindictive glance over his shoulder at the massive stone walls he had just left.

"That warden certainly is going to know I've been there," he added. "No, I'm not telling just what I mean by that. After the holidays are over and I've seen my lawyers—to find out just how far I can go—I'm going to tell a few things.

Survivors of Shenandoah Crash Score Col. Mitchell

Senior Officer and Others Deny Dirigible Was Improperly Equipped and Insist Wreck Was Due to "Act of God."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Survivers of the Shenandoah disaster had their final inning today before the naval court of inquiry and through Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosendahl, senior officer, their spokesman, flatly denied the dirigible had been improperly equipped or operated and insisted the wreck was due to "an act of God."

In a lengthy final argument Rosendahl summed up all of the evidence secured during the extended investigation. He arraigned certain witnesses, including Colonel William Mitchell, who testified the giant air liner was improperly operated and denied Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne went on the fatal flight under protest.

"From the direct examination of Colonel Mitchell is was very apparent to us he had no expert knowledge of his own relative to the disaster. His testimony substantiated fully an utterance of his ecurse that 'any one who read Mitchell's statement would recognize that it is a fine play of words that really means nothing.'"

Rosendahl insisted there was no evidence to show Lansdowne protested the flight because of fear of the weather in the early part of September when the flight took place.

"To believe then the alleged reluctance of Commander Lansdowne to carry out the flight as ordered—that such an officer would jeopardize his crew and the ship wilfully and knowlingly—not only approaches the height of absurdity but slanders the dead," he said.

Rosendahl reviewed expert testimony to show the Shenandoah was not weakened by corrosion or the strain caused by breaking away from her mooring mast at Lakehurst in 1924 and defended the new valve system which was criticized by many witnesses.

office, learned how to handle a key and was sent to Augusta, then an important publishing center. But he quickly came to hate telegraph because it confined him so close and strove to get out and get a job in some other line. But there were no other jobs available.

Gradually the publishing germ entered his blood. He drew up elaborate plans for a magazine and submitted them to various moneyed people. But "an enterprise as hazardous as publishing to be managed by a man without practical experience, did not appeal to them.

Founder of Argosy Magazine.

Finally he laid his scheme before a stock broker who agreed to supply $2,500. Munsey promptly invested $500 he had saved in manuscripts and came to New York. He had $40 when he arrived on a cold bleak day in the winter of 1882.

He engaged an office and invested his capital in an $8 table, a couple of cheap chairs, some pens and a bottle of ink. His first piece of writing was a letter to the broker up in Maine asking for the promised $2,500. Three days later he collapsed over one of the new tables when he received a letter telling him the broker had changed his mind.

But with all his troubles ahead of him he started to work and two months later issued the first number of the Argosy magazine, an illustrated weekly paper of eight pages for boys and girls. Horatio Alger, Jr., was one of the contributors.

Then a publisher offered to bring out the magazine in his own name, retaining Munsey as editor and manager. Two monts later the first number appeared. Three months after the publisher failed, owing Munsey $1,000.

Acquired New York Herald.

Four years later he looked back on 1,460 days of drudgry and, reviewing his finances, knew that he owed $16,000. But he just begun his first serial, "Afloat in a Great City," and readers were beginning to come into the Argosy. In five months he spent $95,000 advertising the magazine and distributed 11,500,000 sample copies of the Argosy. He had arrived.

Forty years later Frank Munsey had become one of the foremost publishers in the United States, numbering his newspapers and magazines by the score and his wealth by millions.

His most notable achievement in the newspaper field came in February, 1920, when he acquired the New York Herald, one of the oldest newspapers in the country and merged it with the New York Sun, which he had purchased in 1916.

The merged publication was called the Sun and the New York Herald for a time and then changed simply to the Herald. At the same time the Evening Sun, another Munsey paper, was changed to the Sun.

He Never Married.

In addition to the Argosy and Munsey magazines, Mr. Munsey acquired the Scrap Book, the Railroad Magazine, the All-Story Magazine, the Ocean, and others, and owned newspapers in New York, Washington, Boston, Philadlephia and Baltimore. His investments were extensive in other fields.

He never married and lived for many years at one of New York's fashionable hotels and maintained an estate at Elizabeth, N. J.

Early in 1924, after several months' negotiation, begun by Mr. Munsey with the intention of buying the New York Tribune, Mr. Munsey sold the New York Herald to Ogden Reid, owner of the Tribune, and the merged paper, bearing the name of New York Herald and New York Tribune, made its bow to New York on March 19 of that year.

F. A. Munsey, Once $40 Month Clerk, Leaves $40,000,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Frank A. Munsey began his career on a $40 a month grocer's clerk, establishing a fortune of more than $40,000,000 through the genius of his subsequent publishing ventures.

Although at various points in his career he owned as many as 17 newspapers and 10 magazines, Munsey had but two daily publications and two periodicals when he died today.

They were the New York Sun, New York Evening Telegram, Argosy-All-Story Magagine and Munsey's Magazine.

Awaits Reunion With Children Who Know Nothing of Past.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Dec. 22.—Nicky Arnstein came back today to the world from which almost two years ago the United States government shut him out.

He came back with society's slate against him wiped clean and with 72 days off for good behavior because a woman's love proved stronger than the demand that he be made to pay for other sins of which he stood accused.

Tonight in Chicago he will meet that woman—Fanny Brice of the "Follies," of the vaudeville stage, and now of the "Music Box Revue," and their children, the woman who, when she married him "for better or for worse" in 1917, meant it literally and proved it, the children who never have been told their father was in prison.

Yet, with this pleasing reunion ahead and in face of the season of forgiveness and good will, Nicky came out of prison in a truculent mood, unchastened by months on end of shoveling ashes and breathing vague threats of telling what he knows and making any number of people sweat for what he has been through.

It was in the early dawn that the gates of Leavenworth prison opened, spewed forth nine men into the long flight of steps that lead to prison, then closed with a clang.

Threatens Exposure.

Eight of the men, grotesquely attired in the misfit outfits which Uncle Sam gives those who have paid their debts behind the bars or in the out-of-date garments they wore when they entered the prison, ran capering down the steps, shouting hilariously.

That was Nicky Arnstein. Tall, slim, elegant, unhurried and immaculately dressed in the new dark overcoat, black fedora, pin-stripe grey suit and gleaming black shoes which Fanny Brice had sent him, he sauntered leisurely along behind the others.

Nicky, middle-aged, a little more grey about the tempies, smiled a bit superciliously behind the stiletto-pointed black mustache he had been permitted to cultivate as his release neared.

"You can quote me as saying I'm glad to be out of that place," he said to reporters.

Then he cast a vindictive glance over his shoulder at the massive stone walls he had just left.

"That warden certainly is going to know I've been there," he added. "No, I'm not telling just what I mean by that. After the holidays are over and I've seen my lawyers—to find out just how far I can go—I'm going to tell a few things.

Survivors of Shenandoah Crash Score Col. Mitchell

Senior Officer and Others Deny Dirigible Was Improperly Equipped and Insist Wreck Was Due to "Act of God."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Survivors of the Shenandoah disaster had their final inning today before the naval court of inquiry and through Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosendahl, senior officer, their spokesman, flatly denied the dirigible had been improperly equipped or operated and insisted the wreck was due to "an act of God."

In a lengthy final argument Rosendahl summed up all of the evidence secured during the extended investigation. He arraigned certain witnesses, including Colonel William Mitchell, who testified the giant air liner was improperly operated and denied Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne went on the fatal flight under protest.

"From the direct examination of Colonel Mitchell is was very apparent to us he had no expert knowledge of his own relative to the disaster. His testimony substantiated fully an utterance of his course that 'any one who read Mitchell's statement would recognize that it is a fine play of words that really means nothing.'"

Rosendahl insisted there was no evidence to show Lansdowne protested the flight because of fear of the weather in the early part of September when the flight took place.

"To believe then the alleged reluctance of Commander Lansdowne to carry out the flight as ordered—that such an officer would jeopardize his crew and the ship wilfully and knowlingly—not only approaches the height of absurdity but slanders the dead," he said.

Rosendahl reviewed expert testimony to show the Shenandoah was not weakened by corrosion or the strain caused by breaking away from her mooring mast at Lakehurst in 1924 and defended the new valve system which was criticized by many witnesses.

office, learned how to handle a key and was sent to Augusta, then an important publishing center. But he quickly came to hate telegraph because it confined him so close and strove to get out and get a job in some other line. But there were no other jobs available.

Gradually the publishing germ entered his blood. He drew up elaborate plans for a magazine and submitted them to various moneyed people. But "an enterprise as hazardous as publishing to be managed by a man without practical experience, did not appeal to them.

Founder of Argosy Magazine.

Finally he laid his scheme before a stock broker who agreed to supply $2,500. Munsey promptly invested $500 he had saved in manuscripts and came to New York. He had $40 when he arrived on a cold bleak day in the winter of 1882.

He engaged an office and invested his capital in an $8 table, a couple of cheap chairs, some pens and a bottle of ink. His first piece of writing was a letter to the broker up in Maine asking for the promised $2,500. Three days later he collapsed over one of the new tables when he received a letter telling him the broker had changed his mind.

But with all his troubles ahead of him he started to work and two months later issued the first number of the Argosy magazine, an illustrated weekly paper of eight pages for boys and girls. Horatio Alger, Jr., was one of the contributors.

Then a publisher offered to bring out the magazine in his own name, retaining Munsey as editor and manager. Two monts later the first number appeared. Three months after the publisher failed, owing Munsey $1,000.

Acquired New York Herald.

Four years later he looked back on 1,460 days of drudgry and, reviewing his finances, knew that he owed $16,000. But he just begun his first serial, "Afloat in a Great City," and readers were beginning to come into the Argosy. In five months he spent $95,000 advertising the magazine and distributed 11,500,000 sample copies of the Argosy. He had arrived.

Forty years later Frank Munsey had become one of the foremost publishers in the United States, numbering his newspapers and magazines by the score and his wealth by millions.

His most notable achievement in the newspaper field came in February, 1920, when he acquired the New York Herald, one of the oldest newspapers in the country and merged it with the New York Sun, which he had purchased in 1916.

The merged publication was called the Sun and the New York Herald for a time and then changed simply to the Herald. At the same time the Evening Sun, another Munsey paper, was changed to the Sun.

He Never Married.

In addition to the Argosy and Munsey magazines, Mr. Munsey acquired the Scrap Book, the Railroad Magazine, the All-Story Magazine, the Ocean, and others, and owned newspapers in New York, Washington, Boston, Philadlephia and Baltimore. His investments were extensive in other fields.

He never married and lived for many years at one of New York's fashionable hotels and maintained an estate at Elizabeth, N. J.

Early in 1924, after several months' negotiation, begun by Mr. Munsey with the intention of buying the New York Tribune, Mr. Munsey sold the New York Herald to Ogden Reid, owner of the Tribune, and the merged paper, bearing the name of New York Herald and New York Tribune, made its bow to New York on March 19 of that year.

F. A. Munsey, Once $40 Month Clerk, Leaves $40,000,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Frank A. Munsey began his career on a $40 a month grocer's clerk, establishing a fortune of more than $40,000,000 through the genius of his subsequent publishing ventures.

Although at various points in his career he owned as many as 17 newspapers and 10 magazines, Munsey had but two daily publications and two periodicals when he died today.

They were the New York Sun, New York Evening Telegram, Argosy-All-Story Magazine and Munsey's Magazine.

$1,000,000 FIRE IN PORTLAND. IND,

PORTLAND, Ind., Dec. 22.—Fire of undetermined origin today destroyed Portland's principal business building, the Weiler block, entailing a loss estimated at nearly $1,000,000.

When Balieff found and engaged Ernest Whitfield, a London street singer, to join the Chauve Souris chorus, he invested the new comer with the name of Akaky Vitovestzky.

'No, No, Nanette,' Will Come to Ceramic Enroute to East

John Hyams and Leila McIntyre Head Talent Chosen for Presentation of Musical Comedy Triumph.

It is only once in a very great while that local amusement friends are stirred to any particular degree of enthusiasm such as has marked the state of feeling which has prevailed ever since it became known that "No, No, Nanette" was coming.

The inquiries about seats is conclusive evidence enough that their remarkably fine musical comedy will enjoy a profitable engagement and will be accorded a deserving welcome. East Liverpool theatregoers will be especially glad to have a chance to enjoy the manifold pleasure features of "No, No, Nanette," an entertainment rich in tunefulness, replete with dance novelties and above all else, telling a consistently funny story, one fraught with convulsive laughter.

The management of the Ceramic theatre was fortunate in getting in on the "ground floor' as it were, as "No, no, Nanette" comes following its six months' triumph in Philadelphia, and 28 weeks in Boston, after a solid year's run in Chicago, and before New York gave its overwhelming approval and has bidden it to remain there until goodness knows when, as all signs point to its breaking musical comedy records in the Metropolis.

The "No, No, Nanette" company which will be seen here, Thursday night, Dec. 31, is one of the five organizations found necessary to cover the demand from coast to coast, any of which is absolutely guaranteed to be the equal of the others in every respect. The greatest care has been exercised in the chosen talent which is headed by John Hyams and Leila McIntyre, among the greatest favorites, and which includes the names of many of the foremost musical comedy celebrities. The chorus is one of special distinction and the production an exact duplicate whith regards to elaborate scenic arrangements and the beautiful costume creations which are so greatly admired.

SCHOOL CHIEF STATES VIEWS

H. C. Leonard Declares Few in State Will Close Doors.

"Few schools in the state of Ohio will be compelled to close during the present fiscal term on account of a lack of finances, and none will have to close in Columbiana county," declared County Superintendent of Schools H. C. Leonard. "There has been a lot said about school finances of late, but considerable of this talk is without foundation."

"There has been some talk about certain schools in Columbiana county running short of finances, but the records in the office of the county board of education now show that so far as the local situation is concerned, ample money is available for the operation of all schools during the present term.

"There are 2,500 school districts in Ohio," Mr. Leonard explained. "No exempted village schools in any county in Ohio are closed and none will close. We have this information from the state department of education. No village or centralized schools in Ohio are closed, and no school district maintaining a high school in any part of Ohio is closed for the lack of funds. There are less than a dozen districts out of the 2,500 in the state that are anticipating financial trouble that might lead to a shortening of the terms.

"In the districts where they have the best schools and where the schools are costing the most they are being adequately financed," Mr. Leonard stated, "but it is easy to understand. The school sentiment that provides good schools also provides the money to maintain them.

"In the district that has permitted its schools to close all kinds of excuses and reasons are being given. They blame it on the state department of education, the county board of education and the county superintendent, the state teachers' association and the state laws.

"None of these are valid excuses. The financial distress of the schools of the state has been over press agented and exaggerated. The department of education has made a thorough and complete survey of the state and has found that all the districts except a very few of the 2,500 districts are adequately financing their schools, and those few districts that are now doing so could finance them if the people really believed in schools and education.

"I am glad to say that Columbiana county is in excellent shape so far as school finances are concerned. Some districts could use more money, but that is always the case everywhere. Many districts put over the three mill levy at the November election, and those who did not vote on the proposition have sufficient school funds to carry on the educational work of the district."

A slag road will be built for the present, and then within the next two years it is likely a concrete top will be spread. This will give another improved highway to connect Columbiana county with Mahoning.

There is no use in delaying the filing of transcripts, and they should be filed within a few days after disposition of cases has been had in the lower courts," Mr. Brookes declared.

An assessment of not more than $2,000 per mile is allowed under the Green law in addition of $1,000 already provided by the state.

In West township, the trustees have agreed to begin work on a mile road extending north of Bayard paralleling the C. & P. railroad to the Columbiana-Stark county line.

SCHOOL CHIEF STATES VIEWS

H. C. Leonard Declares Few in State Will Close Doors.

"Few schools in the state of Ohio will be compelled to close during the present fiscal term on account of a lack of finances, and none will have to close in Columbiana county," declared County Superintendent of Schools H. C. Leonard. "There has been a lot said about school finances of late, but considerable of this talk is without foundation."

"There has been some talk about certain schools in Columbiana county running short of finances, but the records in the office of the county board of education now show that so far as the local situation is concerned, ample money is available for the operation of all schools during the present term.

"There are 2,500 school districts in Ohio," Mr. Leonard explained. "No exempted village schools in any county in Ohio are closed and none will close. We have this information from the state department of education. No village or centralized schools in Ohio are closed, and no school district maintaining a high school in any part of Ohio is closed for the lack of funds. There are less than a dozen districts out of the 2,500 in the state that are anticipating financial trouble that might lead to a shortening of the terms.

"In the districts where they have the best schools and where the schools are costing the most they are being adequately financed," Mr. Leonard stated, "but it is easy to understand. The school sentiment that provides good schools also provides the money to maintain them.

"In the district that has permitted its schools to close all kinds of excuses and reasons are being given. They blame it on the state department of education, the county board of education and the county superintendent, the state teachers' association and the state laws.

"None of these are valid excuses. The financial distress of the schools of the state has been over press agented and exaggerated. The department of education has made a thorough and complete survey of the state and has found that all the districts except a very few of the 2,500 districts are adequately financing their schools, and those few districts that are now doing so could finance them if the people really believed in schools and education.

"I am glad to say that Columbiana county is in excellent shape so far as school finances are concerned. Some districts could use more money, but that is always the case everywhere. FIND BODY IN VACANT HOUSE

Heart Failure Believed to Have Caused Man's Death.

County Coroner John M. Van Fossan, of East Palestine, was scheduled to hold an inquest this afternoon at the John Haugh funeral home over the body of Charles Devie, aged 30, of Pittsburgh, which was found yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the top of a flight of steps in a vacant building at 1321 Main street. He had been dead only a few minutes.

Devie had been an employe of the Pittsburgh Corctruction company, which operates a sand and gravel plant on the site of the old Carroll-Porter Boiler works, on the river bank at Twentieth street.

Sunday night, according to police, he was preparing to go to Pittsburgh. He had purchased a ticket and had sent his trunks ahead. Yesterday morning he was reported to have been seen around Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, aimlessly walking around the streets.

Shirtly before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon he same out of a Main street restaurant near Thirteenth, and went down the street.

A short time later, Earl Densmore, entering the building at 1321 Main to inspect the premises, found the body at the top of the first flight of steps. The street door was standing open.

Densmore immediately notified Chief of Police John Fultz, and the body was removed to the John Haugh funeral home, in Seventh street.

An employe of the construction company later identified the man.

Davie, according to police, had no family, although a brother is living in Pittsburgh. The latter was notified.

The railroad ticket which Devie had purchased, as well as his watch and other valuables, were all in his pockets when the body was found.

A preliminary examination by Chief John Fultz failed to reveal any signs of violence. This, together with the fact that his pockets had not been rifled, prompts the theory, on the face of the finding, of death following an attack of heart failure.

Pending word from the dead man's brother in Pittsburgh, the body will be kept here.

$2,500 ALIMONY AWARDED BY JURY

Alimony has been placed at $2,500 in the divorce case tried before Judge James G. Moore in which a decree was granted Margaret G. Rehman against her husband, John D. Rehman. The plaintiff was represented by Lones, Hill & Davidson of East Liverpool, while the defendant was represented by Attorney W. A. O'Grady of Wellsville. In this case there was a trial to the court, and the decree was granted the plaintiff on the grounds of extreme cruelty.

Mrs. Rehman was then restored to her maiden name, Margaret G. Wilke.

As alimony, the court has set the amount at $2,500, which is the largest judgment of the kind handed down in divorce court in this county in several years. The defendant is also to pay the costs in this case.

May Move High School-Alumni Court Contest Ahead One Day

New Year's Eve Date May Hurt Attendance

Shift Can Easily be Made, According to Director Boone, Because School Opponents Will All be Local Players; Should Meet With Approval of Fans, He Believes.

THE advisability of moving ahead by one day high school's next cage contest, which will send them against the Alumni, is being considered today by Athletic Director O. V. Boone and Coach Lorah.

The tussle with the graduates is down on the books for Thursday, December 31, New Year's eve.

In the opinion of Director Boone, there are quite likely to be a number of other attractions on that night which will be bound to detract from the gate at the high school game.

Inasmuch as there will be no inconvenience to anyone connected with the transaction, because the Blue and White's opponents will be all local players and consequently, as able to play on Wedensday as on Thursday, the proposed change in dates at present appears very feasable in the eyes of school authorities.

The shift also will probably meet with the approval of fans who thus would be able to take in both the game and keep their New Year's eve engagements.

Lorah's passers will be idle for only a short time, probably from Friday until Monday, with brief sessions being scheduled prior to the game with the ex-school stars. Their fine showing against Sam Taylor's Franklin & Marshall quintet here last week indicated clearly that the youngsters have the stuff and, barring accidents, should make this season one of the best in recent years.

They were playing out of their class when they took on the Lancaster delegation, and, besides, it was their first taste of battle this year. Despite these handicops, they gave the visitors the toughest scrap they've had this season.

BISON GRID CARD FRAMED

Nine-Game Schedule to Open on Sept. 25, 1926.

BETHANY, W. Va., Dec. 22.—Athletic authorities at Bethany college have hopes of completing their football schedule for 1926 some time this week. A number of difficulties came up in the arranging of the Tri-State conference games but these have been ironed out satisfactorily. The Bison card calls for nine games, with the opening on Sept. 25. Just who will furnish the opposition in the inaugural has not been decided.

The complete card follows:

Sept. 25—Pending.
Oct. 2—West Virginia Wesleyan at Buckhannon.
Oct. 9—Westminster at Wellsburg.
Oct. 16—Allegheny at Erie.
Oct. 23—Open.
Oct. 29.—Duquesne at Pittsburgh.
Nov. 6—W. & J. at Washington.
Nov. 13—Theil at Wellsburg.
Nov. 20—Waynesburg at Waynesburg.
Nov. 27—Geneva at Beaver Falls.

Hydroplane Champion Will Appear In South

MUSCATINE, Iowa, Dec. 22.—"Ethel XI," 1924 champion of both 340 and 510 class hydroplanes and holder of the world straightaway record of 48.92 MPH made at Oshkosh, Wis., July 5, 1924, has been sold by Charles P. Hanley to G. A. Stillson of St. Petersburg, Fla. The boat has been shipped and the new owner expects to compete with it in Florida regattas this winter. Mr. Hanley, former president of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association, will go as a representative of that organization to the National Motor Boat show in New York Jan. 22-30 to look over the fastest engines, hulls and accessories with the idea of creating a new champion.

IRONDALE FIVE COPS INAUGURAL

Irondale high school opened its court season on the home floor by defeating Hanoverton, 16 to 14. The Salineville girls won from an Alumni sextet, 18 to 0. An extra period was necessary to determine the outcome of the boys' game at the end of the fourth quarter. Hicks shot a field goal in the last few seconds of the extra period and his two points won the game.

Hicks and Ferguson made four and eight points, respectively, of the Salineville total.

The Irondale teams will play their next regular games at Salineville on Jan. 9.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 22.—Knute Rockne never had any thought of leaving Notre Dame, he declared in a public statement. He said he would leave for Europe on January 6.

At New York—"Cowboy" Eddie Anderson, of Wyoming, defeated Georgio Balduc, of Lewistown, Me., 10 rounds. Andy Divodi, New York, outpointed Joe Zink, of Pittsburgh, six rounds. Davey Abad won decision over Max Savitsky, 10 rounds. Harry Galfund defeated Tommy Jordan, 10 rounds. Johnny Grosso, Mount Vernon, N. Y., won decision over Romeo Rojas, Chili, eight rounds. Al Tripoli outpointed Willie Spencer, eight rounds. Johnny Huber defeated Bobby Gentile, six rounds. Billy Reynolds won over Nick De Salvo, six rounds.

Nevers, Lawson Enroute to Keep Grange Date

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 22.—Ernie Never and Jim Lawson, former Stanford football captains, were speeding toward Florida today, where they have an engagement to meet "Red" Grange and his Chicago Bears at Pensacola on January 2.

Following this game Nevers will participate in six more games, receiving the rather tidy sum of $50,000 for his efforts. Lawson, his teammate, will get $500 a game.

Golf Thrilled Thousands During 1925 Campaign; Louise Fordyce, Ohio Star, Rises to New Heights

The five major champions of the golf world, Miss Glenna Collett, drawing the center of the spotlight as she should.

By Norman E. Brown.

A careful study of the sporting records of the dying year of 1925 leaves me with the impression that golf furnished more thrills, considered in the light of their settings, elements of surprise, and general interest, than any of the other leading branches.

First of all was the startling showing of Miss Glenna Collett.

Invading Europe for the first time she fairly stunned the continent with her masterful play. Lack of knowledge of British game, turf conditions and the strain of facing, possibly, both Miss Joyce Wethered and Cecil Leitsch handicapped her in the British tourney, but she met many of the same field in the French women's open championship tourney a short time later and won that title.

Returning to this country she again proved herself the queen of the U. S. golfing fraternity by playing her way through the most brilliant field produced for national competition in the women's ranks.

Where Miss Collett failed, Long Jim Barnes succeeded. A perennial seeker of the British open Barnes played his way through that tourney and won it. The interest in this tourney was increased by the threat hurled by MacDonald Smith, who played spectacular golf until the final round, only to fall down when a low score would have carried him above Barnes.

Smith Grabs a Title, Too.

Smith later won the western open title by playing the brilliant brand of golf he delivered early in the British meet.

Back her eat home, Bobby Jones, Atlanta wonder and one of the greatest tournament players the Scottish game has produced, set out to win back the national open championship, which he had held in 1923.

Up to the finals he climbed his way, with a brilliant exhibition of golf—only to find "Wee Willie" MacFarlane, waiting for him—to challenge his right to the crown. Over 36 extra holes these men battled for supremacy. And when the fiercest battle ever witnessed for the open title was ended MacFarlane had won.

Determined to hold his amateur titles won in 1924, Jones entered the amateur tourney. Star after star, men who had repeatedly foiled Jones' efforts in tournament play, fell by the wayside in that meet. At the closing round it was an unknown, Mr. Watts Gunn, a fellow townsman and personal friend of Bobby's, who challenged his right to the title. Jones won, however.

The national pro tourney threatened to be a tame affair, due to the absence of several of the leading tourney players from it. But the wonderful golf displayed by Walter Hagen carried the tourney into the limelight.

The season saw also the return to turney play of Alexa Stirling Frazer, Atlanta wizard. And her brilliant play caused experts to rate her second in the year's rankings. She won the medal play honors in the national tourney and played through to the finals, only to lose to Miss Collett.

Ohio saw Miss Louise Fordyce, Youngstown star, soar to dizzy heights. Placed ninth last year she was given fourth place in the 1925 rankings.

The pluck shown by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd in her efforts to hold her 1924 national title, and the play of Mary Browne, were other bright features.

Winning Title In Buckeye Court Circuit Will Be Man-Size Task

Ohio Wesleyan, Ohio U., and Wittenberg All Declare Their Prospects are Good; Cincinnati Has Veteran Team.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—Winning the basketball championship in the newly organized Buckeye Athletic association promises to be a real man-sized job plus, this season with five of the six teams in the association boldly admitting that they consider their prospects good.

Ohio University boasts Capt. Charley Wright and a largely veteran squad and points to its near victory over Ohio State in the opening game of its season. Wittenberg has Capt. "Reed" Armstrong and an abundance of fast and husky material. Ohio Wesleyan has Capt. William Turney and Lamme, great point getters last season, and good recruits.

Coach Boyd Chambers at Cincinnati has a squad of veteran giants with eight varsity players six feet or more in height. Pre-season dope on Denison is that the Big Red will have an experienced, rangy, fast and heavy team.

Miami, through the irony of fate, should win the Buckeye association basketball title for it is the only school where prospects are regarded as doubtful. Coach Roy Tilliotson has but one letterman and his squad is not husky. Miami has a number of experienced players, however, who may hit a stride that will prove plenty hot for their Buckeye playmates.

Buckeye teams are now busy with preliminary schedules, Ohio Wesleyan having eight such games, Ohio University seven, Cincinnati six, Wittenberg and Miami each three and Denison but one. Ohio Wesleyan has already played Michigan and Ohio State but will get the bulk of its pre-season practice during the university's present vacation period. The Bishops will play the Isalys at Marion, the University of Alabama at Delaware, Goodyears and Firestones at Akron, Mt. Gilead and Zanesville during holidays. Cincinnati has met Berea and Marietta and still has Cincinnati "Y," Cincinnati Gym, an Alumni team and Akron to meet before the regular season opens.

22 Alabama Players Enroute to Pacific

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 22.—Coach Wallace Wade, of Alabama, is enroute to Pasadena with 22 players for the game with Washington New Year's day. The only stop schedule will be at the Grand Canyon.

For his own family Santa Claus chooses Gifts That Last

SOME folks think of the jewelry store as the place to go, chiefly, for those gifts where expense is the second consideration.

But not Santa Claus! That canny old gift expert knows better than that!

He judges the worth of a gift not alone by what it costs, but by what it yields—in service and satisfaction. . . . And long ago, he discovered that a dollar goes farther at the jewelry store than it does anywhere else, in procuring enduring usefulness and pleasure.

For the jeweler deals in imperishables—in gifts that last, like the fidelity of a fine friendship, for as long as life itself!

Specializing in jewels, the jeweler sees to it that every article in his stock is truly a jewel. And whether it be for adornment or for utility, it must measure up to jewel-standards, in craftsmanship and integrity.

He who must coddle a lean purse or she who may indulge a fat one, both will find there the gifts they would most like to give—comfortably priced within their respective Christmas budgets.

But whatever the price, the quality is always jeweler's quality—uncompromising in its fine standards.

Ask Santa Claus! He knows!

ALLEGED BURGLAR DOES DAREDEVIL STUNTS IN VAIN SEARCH FOR LIQUOR

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—A leap from the ledge of the third story of a South End house across a six-foot areaway through the glass window into a room where two girls were sleeping, a 30-foot drop from another window to the street, the dodging of bullets from a policeman's revolver and a collapse in the street from a bullet wound in the knee—these were the highlights in the sensational chase and capture today of James L. Johnson, 27, of Hartford, Conn., who, with a companion, attempted to burgle a drug store of liquor and narcotics.

George V. Hout, 24, also of Hartford, was captured inside the drug store.

"What a fool I am, I did this for women," Johnson told police.

Two women, one a chorus girl, found in the hotel room where Johnson and Hout were stopping were questioned.

INGRAM'S SQUAD RULES FAVORITE

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"Navy Bill" Ingram and his squad of All-American eastern grid representatives ruled favorites in the mid-west today in their California conquests.

Irvin Uteritz, Michigan quarterback of two years back, joined the squad in Chicago yesterday.

The squad includes: Marks, Indiana, halfback; Farwick, Army, guard; Dilweg, Marquette, end; Hutchinson, Nebraska, center; Garbisch, Army, center; Edwards, Michigan, tackle; Slaughter, Michigan, guard; Sloane, Drake, end; Ingram, Navy, quarterback; Fisher, Indiana, tackle; Uteritz, Michigan, quarterback; Powell, Davis-Elkins, end; Davis, West Virginia, tackle; Fry, Iowa, halfback; Wycoff, Georgia Tech, fullback; Chase, Pittsburgh, tackle; Jones, Florida, quarterback and halfback; Martineau, Minnesota, halfback; Reese, Vanderbilt, halfback. Jack Denies Rumored Rupture With Lawyer

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 22.—Denying reports that he had broken with his legal adviser, Ray Cannon, Milwaukee lawyer, Jack Dempsey declared today he still had under consideration a new proposition of Floyd Fitzsimmons, a mid-west promoter, to stage a Dempsey-Wills bout in 1926. "Cannon," Dempsey said, "has full charge of my legal affairs."

Grange and His Squad Heading for Florida

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Grange and the strengthened Chicago Bears have started another gold rush. They are enroute to Florida, and, subsequently New Orleans and California. The club has signed Goebel, former All-American end at Michigan; Lyman, tackle, Nebraska; Vick, former Michigan quarter, and Erickson, former W. & J. back, who starred for the Chicago Cardinals this fall.

Murrin Making W.V. U. Cage Candidates Step

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 22.—It is going to take some fast stepping on the part of other forward candidates to keep Julian Murrin, Parkersburg, off the varsity quint. Murrin's work, especially his shooting, is better than at any time during the 1925 season. Experience gained last year has given him some of the confidence he lacked at times during the campaign.

LePera Sure of Place On Mountaineer Team

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 22.—In Emory LePera, forward, West Virginia University has a cager of exceptional promise. The clever Morgantown passer is practically certain to land a regular berth on the Mountaineer squad and in presenting him, West Virginia expects to show tristate fans the best forward it has had in recent years.

Bethany to Send Team to Penn Relay Events

BETHANY, W. Va., Dec. 22.—Bethany will probably send a half-mile relay team to the Penn relays this year, having enrolled five of the fastest men in the country. The men who are able to make the relay team and go to Philadelphia in May will have to run their 220 yards in 22 seconds or better.

American Exhibitors Awarded Certificate At Soviet Radio Show

MOSCOW.—American exhibitors in the first Soviet Union radio exhibition jusct closed here after six months have been awarded a certificate of excellence by the jury of directors.

More than 50,000 visitors were recorded at the radio exhibition, which was part of a general scheme now being propagated by the government for the encouragement of amateur interest in the science. For this purpose the government subsidized trips by workmen from the farthest points of the Soviet union, some of them coming from Vladivostock, Turkmenistan and Archangel.

HUDSON-ESSEX CARS POPULAR

Maintains Consistent Six-cylinder Sale Leadership.

Automobile dealers in this territory, in looking over their records, are finding that 1925 is the most successful year they have ever known. In a number of lines there have been increases over 1924 of from 100 to 127 per cent, although 1924 itself was considered an active year.

The record of the year, it is said, will show that although the public regards an automobile wies less wonderment and enthusiasm than some years ago, this has been more than made up by a universal feeling that the automobile is an every day utility and necessity.

"If you want to understand something about the automobile business," points out Roy R. Birch, Hudson-Essex distributor, "just ask the real estate developer what chance there is for him to sell a home which is not equipped to house an automobile—or, in the better districts, two automobiles.

"I have been traveling around the city, and I find that two-car garages are as common as one-car garages two or three years ago. And whereas the one-car garage was an added feature then, it is emphatically standard now. It is this fact that has shown up in the exceptionally high motor registrations.

"The increased business which Hudson-Essex has enjoyed is of course one of the high spots of the year's records. Month after month, Hudson-Essex sales have continued at an even pace—and a consistently fast pace at that. It has had no new cars to introduce, and its sales appeals have been on the point of great all-around value rather than upon innovations. So, without spurts or slums, it has maintained a consistent six-cylinder leadership."

For his own family Santa Claus chooses Gifts That Last

SOME folks think of the jewelry store as the place to go, chiefly, for those gifts where expense is the second consideration.

But not Santa Claus! That canny old gift expert knows better than that!

He judges the worth of a gift not alone by what it costs, but by what it yields—in service and satisfaction. . . . And long ago, he discovered that a dollar goes farther at the jewelry store than it does anywhere else, in procuring enduring usefulness and pleasure.

For the jeweler deals in imperishables—in gifts that last, like the fidelity of a fine friendship, for as long as life itself!

Specializing in jewels, the jeweler sees to it that every article in his stock is truly a jewel. And whether it be for adornment or for utility, it must measure up to jewel-standards, in craftsmanship and integrity.

He who must coddle a lean purse or she who may indulge a fat one, both will find there the gifts they would most like to give—comfortably priced within their respective Christmas budgets.

But whatever the price, the quality is always jeweler's quality—uncompromising in its fine standards.

Ask Santa Claus! He knows!

ALLEGED BURGLAR DOES DAREDEVIL STUNTS IN VAIN SEARCH FOR LIQUOR

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—A leap from the ledge of the third story of a South End house across a six-foot areaway through the glass window into a room where two girls were sleeping, a 30-foot drop from another window to the street, the dodging of bullets from a policeman's revolver and a collapse in the street from a bullet wound in the knee—these were the highlights in the sensational chase and capture today of James L. Johnson, 27, of Hartford, Conn., who, with a companion, attempted to burgle a drug store of liquor and narcotics.

George V. Hout, 24, also of Hartford, was captured inside the drug store.

"What a fool I am, I did this for women," Johnson told police.

Two women, one a chorus girl, found in the hotel room where Johnson and Hout were stopping were questioned.

Jack Denies Rumored Rupture With Lawyer

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 22.—Denying reports that he had broken with his legal adviser, Ray Cannon, Milwaukee lawyer, Jack Dempsey declared today he still had under consideration a new proposition of Floyd Fitzsimmons, a mid west promoter, to stage a Dempsey-Wills bout in 1926. "Cannon," Dempsey said, "has full charge of my legal affairs."

Grange and His Squad Heading for Florida

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Grange and the strengthened Chicago Bears have started another gold rush. They are enroute to Florida, and, subsequently New Orleans and California. Murrin Making W.V. U. Cage Candidates Step

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 22.—It is going to take some fast stepping on the part of other forward candidates to keep Julian Murrin, Parkersburg, off the varsity quint. Murrin's work, especially his shooting, is better than at any time during the 1925 season. Experience gained last year has given him some of the confidence he lacked at times during the campaign.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 22.—In Emory LePera, forward, West Virginia University has a cager of exceptional promise. BETHANY, W. Va., Dec. 22.—Bethany will probably send a half-mile relay team to the Penn relays this year, having enrolled five of the fastest men in the country. The men who are able to make the relay team and go to Philadelphia in May will have to run their 220 yards in 22 seconds or better.

American Exhibitors Awarded Certificate At Soviet Radio Show

MOSCOW.—American exhibitors in the first Soviet Union radio exhibition jusct closed here after six months have been awarded a certificate of excellence by the jury of directors.

More than 50,000 visitors were recorded at the radio exhibition, which was part of a general scheme now being propagated by the government for the encouragement of amateur interest in the science. For this purpose the government subsidized trips by workmen from the farthest points of the Soviet union, some of them coming from Vladivostock, Turkmenistan and Archangel.

HUDSON-ESSEX CARS POPULAR

Maintains Consistent Six-cylinder Sale Leadership.

Automobile dealers in this territory, in looking over their records, are finding that 1925 is the most successful year they have ever known. In a number of lines there have been increases over 1924 of from 100 to 127 per cent, although 1924 itself was considered an active year.

The record of the year, it is said, will show that although the public regards an automobile wies less wonderment and enthusiasm than some years ago, this has been more than made up by a universal feeling that the automobile is an every day utility and necessity.

"If you want to understand something about the automobile business," points out Roy R. Birch, Hudson-Essex distributor, "just ask the real estate developer what chance there is for him to sell a home which is not equipped to house an automobile—or, in the better districts, two automobiles.

"I have been traveling around the city, and I find that two-car garages are as common as one-car garages two or three years ago. And whereas the one-car garage was an added feature then, it is emphatically standard now. It is this fact that has shown up in the exceptionally high motor registrations.

"The increased business which Hudson-Essex has enjoyed is of course one of the high spots of the year's records. Month after month, Hudson-Essex sales have continued at an even pace—and a consistently fast pace at that. It has had no new cars to introduce, and its sales appeals have been on the point of great all-around value rather than upon innovations. So, without spurts or slums, it has maintained a consistent six-cylinder leadership."
